SULLIVAN SPURNS DEATH BY GANG; NEAR COLLAPSE

Today

Desert and Ocean
Two Little Texas Girls
If Adam Could See This Chinese Worm Turns

—By Arthur Brisbane—

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., April 4—This is written in the office of the Santa Barbara Morning Press, owned and well run by R. G. Fernald, and leading its competitor in circulation, which has increased 40 per cent since G. A. Martin became managing editor five years ago.

Santa Barbara, almost too beautiful to be real, is about half way on today's automobile journey from the Mojave Desert, back of the mountains on the highland, to San Simeon, at the ocean's edge north; half way to San Francisco.

This is a land of long distance; today's run of 300 miles is an average trip. Presently, when the new highway is built from Seattle, along the Pacific, through Washington, Oregon, California, Mexico and on down to Panama, you will be able to take a long ride out here.

About 1000 miles, in a straight line, on perfect roads, is all you can do at present.

Crossing the desert east of the mountains going north to the pass leading to Ventura you see many abandoned ranches where men have learned that fighting the desert is hard always and without abundant water hopeless.

Roofs have fallen in, windows gone, fences down, sage brush, greasewood and cactus creeping back over land and once cleared. Lizards, jack rabbits, huge desert turtles and coyotes again taking possession. Each abandoned ranch tells of years of hard, wasted work, and hope at last abandoned.

The unemployment problem is visible, even on desert roads. Men seeking work walk wearily, the young men carrying nothing, the older men, familiar with a hard life, carry heavy bundles, often as big as the man, bedding, extra shoes, clothes, etc.

Their lot is made harder by the wave of crime, which makes automobile drivers afraid to carry their less fortunate fellow men. Scores of good-natured drivers robbed, or shot and robbed, as a result of "giving a lift" cause the majority to harden their hearts and drive on.

Among desert traveling cars, passed on a fast drive, is one of small, well known make, almost as old as the two 16-year-old girls in it. The license plate says Texas. Strong, independent faces those girls have; the driver lifts her thin left arm in friendly salute as you pass.

They do not follow the mountain line north, but go straight on to the Cajon Pass, headed for Hollywood. They dream they will soon be asking Novarro, Barrymore, Gilbert or some handsome entity "wherefore art thou Romeo?" But, sad reality, they will be asking themselves, "Wherefore didst thou leave Texas."

For a while they will learn about life, working in some hospitable Los Angeles cafeteria. Then two Texas boys, very unlike Navarro, Barrymore or Gilbert, will come after them, and they will live happily ever after, with many little Texas babies and a happier career than movies can offer.

They are quite safe in their rattling car on the desert. Each has her little "gun" and each would bore holes in any over-demonstrative person, with a nonchalance that would make Mr. Murad seem all excited.

You drive about 100 miles, a cool wind blowing over snow-covered mountains on your left, then suddenly the mountains open and a wide valley leads down to Ventura and the ocean.

In that valley are hedges of roses in bloom 30 feet high, miles of walnut trees and orange groves, and far up on the hillsides hundreds of oil wells spouting out wealth, thousands of dollars a day, from individual wells.

The power that said—See Genesis—"Let us make a man in our own image," evidently decided in that same week of creation surprise for man out here. Little did Adam dream, looking ruefully back at the flaming sword before the garden gate, that his descendants would find here gardens so much fairer.

Speaking of biblical stories, what do you think of the Chinese forbidding the showing of Ben Hur, because "it is pure propaganda encouraging belief in baseless superstitions," the superstition referred to being the teachings of Christianity? Coming from believers in Shintoism, that seems a little hard. From a Confucian, agnostic in all things, and intellectually dignified, you would resent it less violently.

WARNER HOLDS PARLEY WITH LAWYERS

Meets Bar Committee to Discuss the Conduct of Garrett Case

For an hour and ten minutes, behind the closed doors of his office, Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner met with the Boston Bar Association "committee of eight" today in connection with his investigation of Oliver B. Garrett.

The pensioned liquor raider himself, with the trembling, accusing finger of John F. Sullivan pointed at him, could not be located at his home. Nor could his wife, named as a collector of graft money paid by the Hotel Ritz proprietor.

Garrett is said to be accompanied by a bodyguard wherever he goes.

Police Commr. Herbert A. Wilson did not go to police headquarters today. He was said to be resting from the ordeal of his own examination and the terrific shock of Sullivan's charges, tossed like a bomb into yesterday's hearing.

The Bar Association committee was in reality one of seven today, as one member could not attend the meeting. Warner said he had called them for general advice regarding the conduct of the Garrett investigation.

"Were possible disbarment proceedings discussed?" he was asked.

TO AID WARNER

"The committee was called to assist me in an advisory capacity and my investigation has nothing to do with disbarment action," he replied.

"Until this investigation is closed and until I have given careful consideration to all of the evidence I cannot myself know what facts will be found and reported to the legislature. I never have intimated and I will not intimate what facts will be found and reported."

Asked how Atty. Albert F. Bickford, credited with having influenced Sullivan to tell this story, happened to enter the case, Warner said: "Because I asked him to."

"In what capacity?"

"In a legal capacity," was his non-committal answer.

Meanwhile the inquiry was proceeding without interruption in preparation for the re-opening of the hearings, scheduled for Tuesday.

HAS PARKER LETTER

The attorney-general had in his possession a letter written by Jean Parker, sought for several weeks. The letter was sent recently to a high police official and turned over to Warner for inquiry.

Jean Parker, alias McCabe, alias Delfino, is under indictment by the federal grand jury in the Mann Act cases and it was inside her Medford home that the telephone number of a high police official was found for department of justice men. It was outside her home

Visits Garrett Accuser

State Detective Joe Ferrari is shown leaving the Newbury st. home of John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Hotel Ritz, after he had interviewed Sullivan. He refused to discuss the interview but admitted warning a State Trooper guarding Sullivan to keep an alert watch.

A mystery woman in black was rebuked by State troopers today when she attempted to smuggle a camera under her coat to the grave of the Rev. Patrick H. Power in Holy Cross cemetery, Malden.

The camera was held by them for a time and the woman was allowed to visit the grave without it.

She refused to give her name, but told Troopers John P. Regan and Oliver B. Wesley she came from Connecticut.

She was one of few to visit the grave today, the public apparently heeding the request of Cardinal O'Connell not to crowd the cemetery.

Police will continue to patrol there, however, as many visitors are expected over the week-end.

PACES HOME NERVOUSLY AS SPECIAL GUARD IS KEPT TO PROTECT HIM

John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of Hotel Ritz, was near collapse today in his Newbury st., Back Bay, home.

Torn by conflicting emotions of fear and remorse, Sullivan, worn by illness and nerve-strain, was in a pitiful condition.

Pacing nervously, endlessly, back and forth in a room in his home, muttering disjointedly of the shame he had brought on his family, he frequently declared he wished he were dead.

At times he rushed to the bay window in the front room of his home, and with arms flung wide called on imaginary gunmen to slay him.

State Trooper Joseph Graeco and a private detective first assigned to guard the distracted man, whose chief emotion seemed to be remorse at having turned "stool pigeon," led him away from the window.

He was eventually induced to lie down, but passed a bad night, despite the reassuring presence of the guards furnished after he had requested Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner for protection.

Today the shades were all drawn and Trooper Parochi, who relieved Trooper Graeco, was stationed at Sullivan's side instead of confining his work to the turning away of visitors.

No visitors appeared, but curious persons in automobiles drove slowly past the house, pointing and picturing to each other the awful scenes within.

Ill for some time, the cumulative strain of weeks of indecision and mental anguish, finally resulting in his dramatic appearance on the witness stand, have taken their toll of John Sullivan.

The man appears to be on the verge of a mental and physical collapse, and evidently welcomes it.

State Detective Joseph Ferrari, after visiting the Sullivan home, said:

Although inexpressibly remorseful of the part he has played, Sullivan obtained some cheer from the belief that his story told at the hearing would result in a new trial and acquittal for Albert K. Sidlinger and Nicholas Cockinos.

SHAMED BY ACTIONS.

He declared he had been induced by two policemen to participate in the frameup of Sidlinger and Cockinos and he regretted that participation more than anything else.

"I would give anything in the world if I hadn't done it," he said.

"I'm glad of one thing though. Those boys will get a new trial and be acquitted. That's something."

His remorse at having become a stool pigeon as he declared he was, tore the man and nearly unsettled his reason.

"The disgrace I have brought on my wife and my three boys," he said. "It would have been better if my wife had shot me before I went up to the State House.

"I didn't make up my mind to do it until late after I had talked with my lawyer, Atty. Chamberlain."

Then he would hurry to the window, spread wide his arms, and call for a shot which would put him out of his agony.

Over and again the detectives led him away from the window, and the apparently endless pacing would be resumed.

Eventually worn out, Sullivan was induced to lie down in a back room, while the two guards remained on duty, and passed into a troubled but restful sleep.

Today he was said to be in better shape, but his condition is reported to be such that it may be necessary to place him under the care of a physician.

In his mad pacing about the room Sullivan frequently cried aloud.

"Why did I do it?" he bemoaned. "If I had gone to jail for 10 years it would have been forgotten. But this disgrace on my children. Being a stool pigeon."

HAS 'TOLD IT ALL'

Again he would burst out:

"Why should I fear death? I've nothing left to live for. Let them shoot me."

"I've told it all," he said almost sobbingly. "I can't say any more. I did it. I wish to God I had died first."

As far as plans for the future were concerned, Sullivan was unable to think about anything other than his immediate troubles.

Whether or not the fear of approaching death forced him to make his decision he would not say, but it was evident that some compelling force dragged him to the State House and to the witness stand at the hearing.

His story corroborated to a large extent those told in the columns of the Boston Evening American by Albert K. Sidlinger and Nicholas Cockinos, which were repeated at the hearings.

CRIMINAL ACTION AGAINST GARRETT IS PREDICTED

that they saw parked the car of a Boston policeman.

There were three unexpected "callers" at Warner's office this afternoon. One was Capt. George mander, who carried an "arrest book." He was named with Garrett and Lieut. Daniel H. Hines in graft charges made to Wilson. He was smiling and whistling merrily and remained only a few minutes.

Another was J. Mansfield Scott of Newtonville, former Watch and Ward investigator and friend of Nicholas J. Cockinos. He is now an author. He said he was called in connection with the Garrett case, but refused to reveal what phase of it.

The third "caller" was brought in by a detective in Warner's employ. He is a taxi-driver named as one of two men alleged by Cockinos and Albert K. Sidlinger to have "framed" them at the Ritz Hotel trial at which they were convicted of conspiracy to steal from Sullivan.

Because many of the claims of Cockinos and Sidlinger were substantiated in the admissions of Sullivan yesterday, Warner is going deeply into their allegations that they were "railroaded" to prison by Garrett and other police.

Still another phase of the inquiry was that concerning the use by members of the liquor squad of their own automobiles for raiding parties. Warner's investigators are checking the records of the squad to determine how many private cars were used since 1923 and by what authority. The use of private automobiles for raids was abandoned this year, it was revealed.

Criminal action against Garrett, Sergt. Arthur D. Timmons and Special Officer Arthur M. Tiernan was forecast in both state and federal courts as a result of yesterday's testimony.

Whatever criminal action is taken will be by Atty.-Gen. Warner himself and U. S. Atty. Frederick Tarr—Warner on the grounds of extortion, Tarr on the grounds of conspiracy to violate the prohibition act.

In the meantime, the broken old man who named Garrett, Timmons and Tiernan as the human leeches who preyed upon his finances under threat of exposing the illicit liquor traffic at his hotel was on the verge of collapse in his Newbury st., Back Bay, home.

And down on Deer Island, the two men who went to jail as a result of the Ritz conspiracy trial at which Sullivan, by his own admission, perjured himself, awaited a second call to the witness stand to relate under a new light as a result of Sullivan's "confession," the stories they have already told in the Boston American of Ritz rum and vice conditions, police corruption and the "frameup" of their trial.

week, Sidlinger and Cockinos will come "up the harbor" again and follow on the witness stand Commissioner Wilson, Capt. Patterson and Lieut. Hines.

Although Dist. Atty. William J. Foley called for a transcript of Sullivan's testimony and said he would lay it before a Suffolk county grand jury if Atty.-Gen. Warner sanctioned the move, there is no indication that Warner will delegate any portion of the present inquiry and its consequences to any district attorney.

He will wait until all the evidence is in at the present investigation—he will give Garrett, Timmons and Tiernan and whoever else may be named as receiving money their opportunity for denial—then he will act himself. And there is nothing to indicate that he may not go outside Suffolk county to take that action.

As regards federal action, Tarr, too, will undoubtedly wait until the attorney-general's probe is over and the "defense" is in before he moves. His assistant, Hubert C. Thompson, who has been following closely every development of the inquiry, has a transcript of Sullivan's admissions and he had previously announced that federal grand jury action would be taken against anyone shown involved in conspiracy to violate the liquor laws.

This may include, under Sullivan's testimony, Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch, the Ritz cloakroom concessionaire, said to be Garrett's aunt. Both were named as collectors of Sulivan's monthly tribute to Garrett and both, as a result, will be called upon to testify at the present investigation.

Expect Wilson to Quit, Then Reorganization

Mrs. Hatch previously testified but until Sullivan told his story it did not appear that the pensioned liquor raider's wife would be summonsed as a witness.

The resignation—voluntary or forced—of Police Commr. Wilson and a reorganization of the Boston police force from top to bottom, is forecast as a result of the "blowing of the lid." In such, it is pointed out, a number of innocent men will probably be made to suffer as a result of the inefficiency of their superiors or the corruptness of their comrades.

Commissioner Wilson is nowhere near through the ordeal of his examination by Special Asst. Atty.-Gen. Damon E. Hall. The matter of Garrett's retirement on pension for an old injury and while under charges has not yet been touched upon by the special prosecutor. Regarding it some of the most sensational testimony of the investigation is predicted.

Wilson says: "I have not resigned; I am not going to resign." Nor does he profess to see in his own admissions any proof that, as the executive head of the Boston police force, he was lax in his investigation of graft charges against his men.

He stands cleared, as does Supt. Michael H. Crowley, of any taint of graft in connection with the Ritz Hotel.

But Sullivan's low spoken testimony, which he heard with his lips between his teeth, was a terrific blow to the implicit faith which he testified, he had in his men. Whether that faith still persists he does not say.

Garrett says: "Sullivan is a liar." It was predicted on many sides today that if Garrett is guilty of the charges made and if he sees himself "going," he will carry out the threat attributed to him to take "the higher-ups" to prison.

Lieut. Daniel H. Hines, who, Hal. intimated yesterday, has a larger bank account than the Garretts' $122,959, admits he has some resources as a result of heritage and real estate transactions.

He denies, however, that his bank account is or was larger than the Garretts'.

Tiernan has "nothing to say."

Timmons has "nothing to say."

Sergt. Driscoll, named as one who ate and drank free of charge in the "police rest room" at the Ritz, has "nothing to say."

Mrs. Garrett has "nothing to say."

Mrs. Hatch has "nothing to say."

Governor Allen, at this time, has "nothing to say."

Sullivan has "said his say" and torn the lid from the kettle wherein charges of liquor and vice traffic and police graft have simmered for five years. He is immune from prosecution by the State under the grant of the attorney-general.

Today the "little gang" is on the run. It has held its conference and discussed the Sullivan breakdown. It casts its figurative eye with some apprehension upon Garrett and other witnesses to come.

Mr. Sullivan was a little more than they had bargained for. They realize at last that the end of their reign is very close at hand. The gang is interested now, not in retaining its power but in "getting out from under" with as much grace as possible and with a whole skin.

Senator Osborne of Lynn, chairman of the committee on municipal finance, after conference with legislative leaders, began drafting of a bill to substitute for a single police commission, appointed by the governor, a board of three, one appointed by the governor, and one by the mayor, these two to select the third.

Dist.-Atty. Foley, interviewed at his South Boston home, declared that if the attorney-general desires, the case against Garrett and his wife may be presented to the grand jury coming in on Monday next for the April term.

'Used My Best Judgment,' Explanation of Wilson

POLICE COMMISSIONER HERBERT A. WILSON denied for another time today that he had either resigned or intended to resign.

Wilson sat within three feet of John F. Sullivan, proprietor of the defunct Ritz Hotel, when Sullivan "blew the lid" off the Garrett investigation with his startling testimony.

"I have not resigned and have no intentions of resigning," the commissioner said.

"It will appear, when all the facts are brought out, that at all times I have exercised my best judgment and discretion, acting under the law and in reliance upon the information given to me by capable and responsible executives of this department whose integrity cannot be questioned.

"When I took the office I had a full realization that both I myself and also the men under me, to the extent that we performed our full duty, would incur the enmity of designing politicians and of flagrant lawbreakers."

Sullivan Advised by Counsel to Tell "Whole Truth"

It was on the advice of counsel that John F. Sullivan took the stand at the State House to make public confession of his payment of graft to Garrett.

Attorney Lafayette R. Chamberlain, to whom Sullivan appealed in his dilemma, refused to disclose how long he had been retained by the former hotel proprietor.

"He came to me and wanted to know what he should do," Chamberlain stated, "and I told him that I thought it was his duty to tell the truth as he did."

Early Decision on Brissenden Appeal

With the announcement that written briefs were ordered filed in Supreme Court before next Wednesday on the legal issues raised by the refusal of Alfred H. Brissenden to testify in the Garrett hearing, a decision on or before that date was seen today.

Brissenden, sometime employe and deliverer of milk for the Garrett milk farm in Hingham, refused to testify on advice of counsel.

GARRETT FILES TAX PROTEST

A formal claim, protesting an assessment of $5327 for income tax payments alleged to be due for 1926 and 1927, has been filed by Oliver B. Garrett with the board of tax appeals in Washington.

Tax officials claim Garrett evaded payment of approximately $3000 during those years, the balance of the sum comprising fines levied by agents who recently audited the accounts of the Pine Grove Dairy Farm at Hingham.

ALLEN AWAITS FULL REPORT

Reports to the effect that Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson submitted his resignation to Governor Allen are flatly denied by the Governor.

"Never at any time since I assumed office as Governor has Mr. Wilson's resignation been before me," he said empatically.

In reply to a question as to whether he had arranged for a conference with the police commissioner as a result of his two days' testimony in the Garrett investigation, the Governor answered in the negative.

"And," he added, "the commissioner has not asked to see me."

The Governor reiterated that he has not read Wilson's testimony and that he will wait until he gets a complete report from Atty.-Gen. Warner before so doing.

Accuser and 3 Raiders

John F. SULLIVAN OLIVER B. GARRETT

Special Officer ARTHUR TIERNAN Sergt. ARTHUR D. TIMMONS

John F. Sullivan, former Ritz Hotel owner, and three of the officers to whom he alleges he paid graft. The officers are ex-Patrolman Oliver B. Garrett, ousted rum raider, Special Officer Arthur M. Tiernan, Station 5, and Special Officer Arthur D. Timmons, Station 5. Sullivan made his charge as "bombshell" at Garrett hearing.

GARRETT WILL TAKE STAND TO DENY CHARGES

Declares He Will Prove That All of Sullivan's Statements Were Lies

Oliver B. Garrett will take the stand in the attorney-general's investigation, and refute charges made against him by John F. Sullivan and others, he said today.

Garrett declared that all the statements made by Sullivan were lies, together with those of other underworld characters who have told their stories to the attorney-general.

"Of course, Sullivan's story is a lot of plain lies," he said.

"I want the public to know that before the United States Grand Jury he swore that he never gave me or any other policeman a dollar. Before the Suffolk County Grand Jury he swore to the same facts. In the Ritz trial, before 12 men, he again swore that he never gave a dollar to me or any other police officer.

"I am not at all disturbed about Sullivan's testimony. I am concerned that he should bring the name of my good wife and an honest working woman, Mrs. Hatch, into his lies.

"If there is any among the public who will believe that I was continually raiding his place while he was giving me money and that he continued to give me money, as he testifies, though I arrested him time and again, I am sorry for their lack of brains.

"He told up there that he told me that there was $4500 worth of liquor in a room in his place while I was there raiding his place, that nobody could find the stuff, but that he told me where it was and I went up and seized it and took it away and then the next day he gave me the graft money just the same.

"He says that he perjured himself before two grand juries and one petit jury. I say that he perjured himself today.

"Imagine an old bootlegger like Sullivan continuing to pay graft while he is being raided regularly and has $4500 worth of rum taken away. It is too silly to talk about."

WARNER LAUDED BY MINISTERS

In a public statement praising Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, three representative ministers today told of a plea to Governor Fuller two years ago that they said was not even answered.

The ministers, Revs. A. Z. Conrad of the Park st. church; Lynn J. Radcliffe of the College Ave. Methodist church, Somerville; and Robert Watson, secretary of the Lord's Day League of New England, asked for a complete investigation of the affairs that are being probed now at the State House.

"Joseph E. Warner has placed Boston under the highest obligation to him by his thoroughgoing investigation of police conditions," the statement said.

"He has the hearty co-operation of every well-intentioned person in Greater Boston.

"Let the public please take note that two years ago a few of us credibly informed about the situation and indignant at the conditions attending a supposed 'investigation' where every condition made real investigation impossible, wrote to Governor Fuller about it."

The letter told the then governor that "all good citizens of Massachusetts are burning with righteous indignation that law violations have been permitted to go unchecked."

Silence was the response to the appeal, today's statement said, and another signed by 100 clergymen was sent Governor Fuller, who turned it over to the Legislature the statement said.

"A committee was appointed and at this point a definite accusation from another quarter furnished an excuse for 'an honest to goodness investigation'"

LIVINGSTON DEFIES PROBE

"No one can point the finger of graft at me. I'll clear whatever taint has been placed on my record by annonymous letters if the attorney-general calls me to testify. I have gained nothing from police work but a living wage, a clean record and a good name and I'll defend it to the last."

This statement was made today by Capt. William W. Livingston of Station 15, Charlestown, named by Police Commr. Wilson as one of the men assigned to investigate Garrett.

The former leader of the "flying squadron" is known as one of the strongest disciplinarians of the department and in the past his investigations of complaints against officers have resulted in many dismissals.

His organization of the squadron and the manner in which he directed its operations won for him the commendation of his superiors and scores of prominent business men.

Get Out, Mr. Wilson

You Are Not the Man to Reorganize Department

HAD Police Commissioner Wilson been alive to his responsibilities in 1925 or 1926, Boston would have been spared the scandal now being revealed.

Nearly five years ago, allegations of grafting and corruption in the police department became so common as to finally come to the attention of even Mr. Wilson himself.

Instead of taking the positive action any energetic public official SHOULD and MUST take in such an emergency, Mr. Wilson chose to SIT BACK AND DO NOTHING.

In fact, his procedure was the VERY WORST he could have adopted.

He referred serious charges against Garrett and others in the police department BACK TO THE VERY MAN whose conduct had been challenged.

Naturally the reports that came back to him from these officials were a complete whitewash. And naturally enough these reports came back to Mr. Wilson almost immediately!

There was no delay whatever in these men returning the expected verdict, under the circumstances, of "Not guilty."

Mr. Wilson continued his revelations as to the FUTILITY OF HIS METHODS as police commissioner again yesterday in the Garrett hearing.

The attorney general's office climaxed Mr. Wilson's EXPOSE OF HIS OWN METHODS with the testimony of John F. Sullivan that the latter had been paying graft money to Garrett and others over a long period of time.

Had Mr. Wilson had enough interest in his department to look into this situation, back in 1925, the appalling state of affairs of which the Garrett case is but a minor item, naturally would have been stopped then.

Mr. Wilson has proved beyond question that he is unable to function efficiently as Boston's police commissioner.

He has no excuse to try to continue longer in the position.

HE SHOULD GET OUT AT ONCE.

If he does not get out of his own volition, if he still has nerve enough to try to retain domination over the department, Governor Allen and his council should take the situation into their own hands.

Boston has had enough of Mr. Wilson, and of Wilson methods in grappling with rottenness in the police department.

An immediate and complete shakeup of the Boston police department is inevitable. Mr. Wilson is not the man to conduct such a reorganization.

He should quit—NOW.

LIEUT. HINES SAYS HE MADE FORTUNE IN REAL ESTATE

As the authorities continued the probe today of the bank account of Lieut. Daniel F. Hines of the liquor squad, already revealed as $150,000, Hines said his funds were the result of real estate and stock transactions over a period of 30 years.

Lieut. Hines' salary is now $2700 a year. He has been a member of the department more than 35 years.

"I have been in the real estate business off and on for nearly 30 years," he said.

"I have bought and sold real estate through my first wife and again through my second wife ever since 1899. I have dealt in parcels of land from the South Shore to the North Shore and at one time owned 28 parcels at Reading, on which the values have greatly increased, as everybody knows.

"I started in the business when my first wife was left a share of an estate worth $30,000 and when she died I was left her property valued then at $15,000.

"It is natural to see I have made money in these transactions. A person would hardly stay in a business or have anything to do with it unless he did have some success with it.

"For the last four or five years I have been trading in stocks. It is natural that a man trading back and forth in stocks, bonds, etc., would have a checking account showing large deposits.

In spite of his large transaction, the lieutenant revealed that the has lived in a rented house at 5 Sacco st., Dorchester, for the same 30 years. The house is assessed for $3100. During that time Hines' salary would have amounted to more than $50,000.

"It's unfair and mean to have a man's name and his family brought out in this way," he said. "Everybody knows me and they know if I got any money I got it honestly."

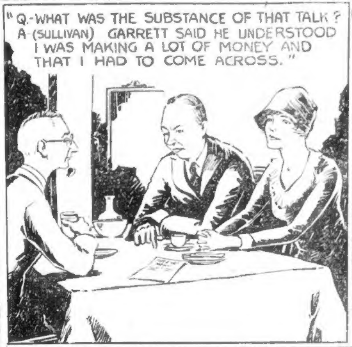
The record of $150,000 in the name of the liquor lieutenant was revealed in just one bank, according to investigators.

Got Graft Story

Atty. Arthur F. Bickford. who interviewed John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Hotel Ritz, and convinced him he should tell his story of police graft to Atty.-Gen. Warner.

LURID PICTURE OF HOW HE WAS "BLED" PAINTED BY SULLIVAN

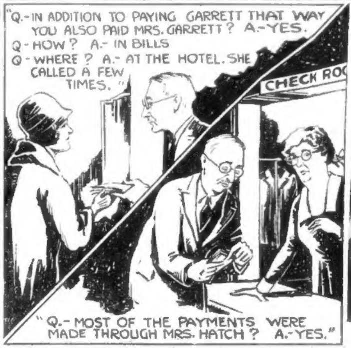
John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Ritz Hotel, admitted that he perjured himself in the notorious Ritz conspiracy case, and told how he made monthly payments of protection money to Oliver B. Garrett and other policemen. Sullivan's sensational testimony may be the basis of immediate action against Garrett.



"Q.-WHAT WAS THE SUBSTANCE OF THAT TALK? A-(SULLIVAN) GARRETT SAID HE UNDERSTOOD I WAS MAKING A LOT OF MONEY AND THAT I HAD TO COME ACROSS."

Garrett, then at the zenith of his power as "czar" of the liquor squad, made his first proposition, Sullivan said, over the dinner table at the Ritz Hotel. Mrs. Garrett was with her husband when he is alleged to have told Sullivan, "You will have to come across" with protection money.

Here is Mrs. Oliver B. Garrett, who, according to Sullivan, was an able lieutenant to her husband in the collection of graft from the Ritz.



"Q.-IN ADDITION TO PAYING GARRETT THAT WAY YOU ALSO PAID MRS. GARRETT? A.-YES.
CHECK ROO
"Q.- MOST OF THE PAYMENTS WERE MADE THROUGH MRS. HATCH? A.-YES."

Mrs. Garrett called "a few times" at the Ritz and received money from Sullivan, he testified. Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch, an aunt of Garrett, who was installed in the check room of the hotel, received most of the payments, the former proprietor said. Mrs. Hatch has denied any knowledge of graft.

Mrs. Hatch was one of the first witnesses called at the Garrett hearings. She distinguished herself for a surprising lack of memory.

NEED POLICE AID TO GET CENSUS

Chicago, April 5 (AP)—Announcing yourself as a "census taker" at 5839 Sheridan rd. is much like shouting "wolf! wolf!"

The reason, of course, is that it's been done before. Last week three men entered 5839 Sheridan rd. as "census takers," and walked out with about $50,000 worth of jewels belonging to Mrs. Lottie Brenner Von Buelow, who lives there.

Yesterday another caller said he was the census taker. This time it really was the government enumerator, but nobody believed it. The door was slammed in his face. The census taker came back with a policeman, explanations were made and the blanks filled out.

Wins $102,000

ANALYZE 8667 RUM SAMPLES

Samples of most of the liquor seized in police raids which is to be used in court as evidence anywhere in Massachusetts, find their way into the pure food and drug division at the State House for analysis. Hermann C. Lythgoe is director of this department of public health.

The last available figures show that in one year analysis was made of 8667 samples of liquor including beer, cider, wine, distilled spirits, extracts, alcohol, and miscellaneous liquids. The average alcoholic content of all this liquor was approximately 30 per cent.

The method this department has adopted for testing liquor samples is a very thorough one, insuring that no mistakes will be made.

The liquor turned into the State department for analysis comes from approximately 150 cities and towns, with the largest number of samples naturally turned in from the centers of greatest population.

There were 11 cities turning in more than 100 samples, Boston leading all the rest with 2772. The others are as follows: Cambridge, 516; Chelsea, 161; Lawrence, 216; Lowell, 710; Lynn, 282; Malden, 255; Pittsfield, 106; Salem, 117; Somerville, 194; Springfield, 302.

Worcester is not represented in these figures as that city and a few other towns throughout the State have their liquor analyzed by local chemists.

VICTORIA TO BE TAKEN HOME

Rome, April 5 (AP)—Funeral services in Rome for Queen Victoria of Sweden, who died here last night after a heart attack, will be held Wednesday.

A special train will carry the body and the royal funeral party, including King Gustave, Prince William and Princess Ingrid, to some German port, from which a Swedish warship will take the body to Stockholm.

Premier Mussolini today ordered the flags on all public buildings throughout the Kingdom of Italy to be carried at half-mast in honor of the Swedish Queen who had spent so many winters during her 20 years' illness from bronchial trouble here.

Boy Killed Playing Tag in Chicago Home

Chicago, April 5 (INS)—A parlor game of tag was blamed today for the death of Robert Blanchard, four. He and a playmate pulled an electric cord, tumbling a heavy table lamp down on their heads, killing Robert instantly.

PRESIDENT BAGS GOOD CATCH

Madison, Va., April 5 (AP)—A rugged day in the out-of-doors, whipping the swift streams and quiet pools of the source waters of the Rapidian for elusive trout, brought President Hoover a welcome change today from the daily grind of the presidency.

Momentous decisions were confined to a box of live flys from which he selected the most enticing lures. Seasonal conditions gave the chief executive a preference for the "Royal Coachman" and "Grizzly King."

A well-filled creel and a sharp appetite for dinner were his reward. Other members of the official party also had a good catch to show.

Accompanying the President were Secretary Lamont, Secretary Wilbur, Atty.-Gen. Mitchell, Representative Fort of New Jersey, Capt. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, and Lawrence Rickey, one of the President's secretaries.

Professors Aid Hub Publicity Bureau

Professors representing five of the major educational and technical institutions of Greater Boston are at present contributing studies and surveys to the municipal commercial, industrial and publicity bureau, established by Mayor Curley.

Chinese Nationals Order War Move

Nanking, China, April 5 (AP)—The Nationalist government today issued a mandate ordering an expedition to be undertaken against Yen Hsi-shan, governor of Shansi province, who is actively opposing the government of Chiang Kai-shek.

Cutler was arrested last night by Patrolman John Mancini of the Malden police, charged with non-support of his invalid wife and children, and was taken to Malden police headquarters.

During the search of the prisoner's clothing, police found $21.21. But that was not all. Patrolman Mancini noticed a suspicious bulging about Cutler's hips, and, being a curious man, decided to investigate.

It was discovered that Cutler was a two-pant man, and a search of the inner pair of trousers uncovered the sum of $400 in a leather pouch pinned inside the garment.

WILD GUSHER ON NEW RAMPAGE

Oklahoma City, April 5 (AP)—Hurling aside man's puny mechanical contrivances, which for seven hours had held under control the recalcitrant gusher, the Mary Sudik No. 1, the well early today again resumed its wild rampage, flaunting a rumbling pillar of petroleum over the South Oklahoma City field.

The big well smashed out of control at 1:05 a. m. after a specially-constructed master gate, known as an "overshot" began to leak.

The leaks widened rapidly; anchor bolts creaked and the whole structure began to give way. Fearing the "overshot" would be ripped loose and sent smashing up through the 122-foot steel derrick, the few men who had been stationed to watch the well through the night flung open the valves, and the column of oil and gas again spurted high over the crownblock and spattered down over the already oil-soaked countryside.

I. C. C. MAN HITS PENNROAD

Washington, April 5 (AP)—Joseph B. Eastman, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, testified today before a House committee investigating railroad holding and investment trust companies that the commission favored the inquiry because it feared that through the action of certain railroad holding companies, it was losing control of railway unification.

Eastman sai dthe Allegheny Corp., wheih is controlled by the Van Sweringen interests, and the Pennroad Corp., which controls stock of the Pennsylvania system, were two principal holding companies to be scrutinized.

CONFESSES IN $200 HOLDUP

Springfield, April 5—A confession of his part in the $200 J. G. Roy & Sons lumber company holdup was made to police today by George Sheldon, 31, of Ft. Pleasant ave., a few minutes after they had arrested him.

He refused to tell who his companion in the robbery was.

Sheldon pleaded guilty in district court to a charge of assault and robbery while armed on William Tegethoff, lumber company clerk, and was committed to jail in default of $15,000 bail for the grand jury.

His arrest followed a tip to police from August Boudreau, garage employe, that two men had borrowed his auto and transferred its license plates to the machine used in the holdup. Boudreau is held for further questioning.

Suspect Held for $45,000 Theft 11 Years Ago

Samuel Weinhouse, sought for 11 years for a $45,000 theft in Boston, is now in custody of the New York police.

Weinhouse and two others were arrested in 1918. They were charged with the theft of five express teams and merchandise, valued at $45,000. Weinhouse and his two companions defaulted.

PROBE FATAL AIR CRASH

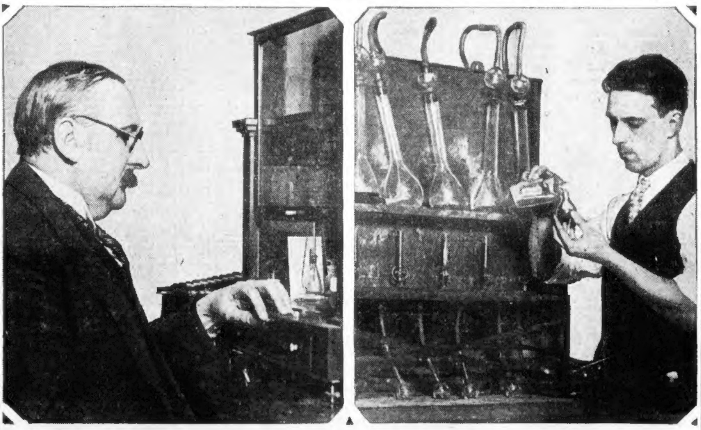
Garden City, N. Y., April 5 (AP)—Authorities today sought the cause of an accident in which T. Worden Hunter, president of the Bach Aircraft Corporation, of Van Nuys, Cal., and his pilot, R. W. McAllister, were killed when their plane fell and burned.

They were maneuvering for a landing at Roosevelt field, witnesses said, when the left wing of their three-motored monoplane appeared to come loose.

Pilots at Roosevele field who saw the plane just before the crash, said they believed the impression that a wing collapsed was an optical illusion. Their theory was that the pilot made too sharp a turn with his motors throttled, stalling the plane with its wings at an oblique angle. This caused the nose to drop.

Hunter and McAllister arrived at Roosevelt field Wednesday from the west coast. Hunter was 35 years old, married and the father of two children. He lived in Pasadena, Cal. He was the son of Thomas Hunter, a retired capitalist of Detroit. McAllister, about 33, lived at Los Angeles. He was unmarried.

Police Turn to State House for Aid in Testing Liquor



Towns far into the Berkshires join with those near Boston in sending liquor samples to the department of public health at the State House for analysis as to their alcoholic content. HEBREW SCHOOL HEADS MEET

The first session of the New England Hebrew Teachers' College Conference, called by Dr. Leon S. Medalia, will open tomorrow at 2:30 in the college auditorium, 14 Crawford st., Roxbury.

Preceding the opening session there will be general inspection of college buildings. A banquet will follow.

The conference, which is being held to interest Jewish leaders in New England, will be attended by many delegations. There will be groups present from Worcester, headed by Archibald Hillman; from Springfield, led by Nathan E. Goldstein; from Lynn, in charge of Henry Yozell, and from Providence, R. I., led by Rabbi Jacob Sonderling. Other delegations present at the conference will include those from Chelsea, Cambridge, Malden, Portland, Me., and Portsmouth, N. H.

The opening remarks at the conference session will be made by Dr. Medalia, followed by a report on advanced Jewish education in New England by Louis Hurwich. Dr. Samuel Perlman, dean, will report on the status of the college and this will be followed by greetings by Prof. Nathan Isaacs. There will be short reports from delegates concerning Jewish education in their communities and then plans will be considered for the organization of an associate board of trustees for the college.

LOSES LIFE IN JAIL BREAK

Ossining, N. Y., April 5 (AP)—A stream of machine gun bullets cut short the attempted escape of a Sing Sing convict after he had scaled two walls and plunged into the Hudson river last night. His body was recovered 15 minutes later with a bullet wound in the neck.

The recreation period had ended and the prisoners were falling in to be marched to their cells for the night when Alphonse Tarrello, 24, serving a term for robbery, dashed across the yard. Ignoring shouts of guards, he scrambled over a 16-foot barrier, ran across the intervening space and climbed a 12-foot wire fence surmounted by sharp spikes.

As he ran toward the river Ernest Bullard, a guard stationed on the dock, called to him to halt and leveled a machine gun. Tarrello kept on toward the water and the guard opened fire. With bullets spattering all about him, Tarrello plunged into the river and swam a short distance before he sank.

Carolina Candidate on "Beer" Platform

Florence, S. C., April 5 (AP)—A. H. Williams, county attorney has announced his candidacy for governor on a "light wines and beer" platform, the beverages to be sold under government supervision.

Williams, 35, a Democrat, has served two terms in the South Carolina house, and three in the senate.

THREE PERISH IN N. Y. FIRE

New York, April 5 (AP)—Three persons lost their lives and three other members of the same family were injured early today in a fire that swept their home in Dean st. Brooklyn.

The dead are Mrs. [illegible] Antigano, 50, and daughters, [illegible] 17, and Marie, 15.

The injured are Vincent Antigano, 55, the father, and two daughters, Carmine, 10, and Lillian, eight.

Mother Escapes in Fire With Kiddies

Fire in the rear of a [illegible] wooden dwelling on School st., Revere, drove a mother and two children to the street and caused damage of $800. Josephine Solini, a young girl living next door, suffered serious cuts on her hands and arms when she smashed a glass panel in the front door to warn Mrs. Cora Ross on the second floor. Mrs. Ross carried her two children to safety.

Aiding College

Rabbi Harry Levi

Judge A. K. Cohen

Rabbi Levi and Judge Cohen will be among the chief speakers at the conference and banquet tomorrow at the Hebrew Teachers' College, 14 Crawford st., Roxbury, when an associate board of trustees will be formed.

CURLEY, FITZGERALD BACK FIGHT TO GIVE BOSTON HOME RULE

AGREE MAYOR SHOULD NAME POLICE HEAD

Legislators Also Join Battle to Take That Power From Governor

The demand of the Boston Evening American for delegation of power to the City of Boston to appoint its police commissioner has received the vigorous support of Mayor James M. Curley and ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

For more than a decade both have unsuccessfully fought for the abolition of State interference in the appointment of municipal department heads but they predict the picture of his administration of police affairs painted by Commissioner Wilson in his testimony at the Garrett probe would prompt the citizenry of Boston to demand appointment of the police head at the hands of the mayor.

While Mayor Curley refrained from comment on the revelations of the Wilson testimony "until all the evidence in the case has been presented," ex-Mayor Fitzgerald was outspoken on the disclosures it made public.

FOR HOME RULE

The statement of Mayor Curley is as follows:

"Replying to your request for a statement relative to the appointment of the police commissioner, I beg to say that I have always believed in home rule for the government of the city of Boston. In justice to myself, at this time I must adopt the same policy as his excellency the governor, namely, to refrain from making any statement of my own views relative to the conduct of Commissioner Wilson until all the evidence in the case has been presented."

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald said: "The state authorities took away from Boston the privilege of appointing the police commissioner because they thought the city incapable of handling it effectively. The Garrett investigation has shown the State unfit to carry the responsibility of the appointment.

"Everyone knew for years that Wilson was not the right man for the job and he should have resigned or have been removed long ago.

BOSTON IS HELPLESS

"There is no reason why the city should not have the power of appointing the police commissioner since it now names the heads of all other municipal departments.

"The Garrett case has shown that the State has made a mess of its power. The statements purported to have been made by Wilson on the stand were enough to show he was unfitted for the job.

"I heartily approve of the demand made by the Boston Evening American for return to the city of Boston of the right to appoint its police commissioner."

Governor Allen and ex-Mayor Nichols both refused to discuss transfer of the appointive power.

HEARN FOR PLAN

Rep. William H. Hearn of East Boston said: "I believe that the mayor of Boston is fully competent to appoint a police commissioner.

"Such a situation would work out to much greater advantage by reason of the fact that the mayor must approve all expenditures for the police department. It is essential that the mayor and the police commissioner work in harmony.

"GOVERNOR SHOULD FAVOR"

Representative Timothy J. McDonough of Jamaica Plain said: "The Legislature has just passed and the governor has signed the bill removing civil service confirmation from department head appointments made by the mayor of Boston. To be consistent, the Legislature and the governor must favor the bill to restore to the mayor of Boston the right to appoint the city's own police commissioner.

"Boston pays all of the expenses of the police department and should have complete say as to who the commissioner should be. It is about time that this measure of home rule be restored to the citizens of Boston."

Senator Frank W. Osborne of Lynn said: "Transferring the appointing power from the Governor to the Mayor of Boston in the matter of the police commissionership is something I would like to give mature consideration to. Undoubtedly there is something to be said on both sides."

CLEAR ADVANTAGE

Rep. Thomas S. Kennedy, Boston:—"The advantage of placing the appointing power in the hands of the mayor instead of the governor is clear. The mayor is far more than the governor responsible for and interested in the City of Boston. His responsibility to the electorate for his appointments is much more direct than that of the governor.

"Appointments by the mayor also satisfy the home rule principal, while appointments by the governor do not. It certainly would be hard to prove that State control of the Boston police department is superior in the administration of its affairs to that of the City of Boston."

Rescued Crew of Sunken Rum Runner

RUM CREW TO RETURN HOME

Earl Grey, British consul in Boston, today made arrangements for the return to Nova Scotia of the seven members of the crew of the sunken schooner Aramay, following the release of the men by federal authorities.

The crew probably will return Monday or Tuesday on the Yarmouth. Although there were 785 cases of liquor on board the lost vessel, the men were not held. Their ship, after an investigation, was found to have been sunk from natural causes rather than from scuttling as first reported.

The liquor was en route to the Bahamas from St. Pierre, and the ship sprung a leak by hitting ice near St. Pierre. The coast guard cutter Frederick Lee had towed the boat for a few miles when she suddenly sank.

False Fire Alarms Are Rung by Pigeon in Her Nest

Marshalltown, Ia., April 5 (AP)—The fire bell here had been ringing every hour or so for days, and all sorts of traps were laid in hopes of catching a supposed practical jokester. Search led to the bell itself and it was found a brooding pigeon had built a nest around the electric cord.

Insulation had worn off and the wire was entwined with bits of string so every time the pigeon turned the eggs a contact was made that rang the bell.

IMAGINARY FOE PILLAGES WEST

Sacramento, Cal., April 5 (AP)—A theoretical enemy today slaughtered, pillaged and burned its imaginary way through Central California without meeting resistance as the army air corps abandoned its defense positions and took a day off to honor Gov. C. C. Young.

The hypothetical loss of life and the amount of punitive destruction in the war torn area could not be ascertained, because every communication line had been wrecked by the enemy. Every highway and railroad was blocked and shipping was imaginarily bottled up at San Francisco.

BODY OF MILES TO BE EXHUMED IN INQUIRY

Los Angeles, April 5—With the finding in Los Angeles of a key witness, came announcement from Washington that Federal authorities had "all but decided" to exhume the body of Basil Miles, former husband of Mrs. H. H. Rogers, in the mystery surrounding his death.

The key witness, is Mrs. Wells Root, of Paris, Boston and Washington, now making her home in Los Angeles. Mrs. Root said today:

"I have stated to an agent of the Department of Justice that the story widely printed that Mr. Miles was given a highball a few moments before he died in the Washington Hospital two years ago is preposterous.

"When Mr. Miles died Mrs. Rogers, then Mrs. Miles, and I were the only persons in the hospital room."

James Hicks, negro valet to Miles, has been quoted as saying he was in the room and that Miles was given a highball shortly before his sudden death.

"No drink of any kind, not even water, was served Mr. Miles," said Mrs. Root.

"Suddenly he suffered a seizure. I called the resident physician, who administered oxygen. He saw from the first, however, that the attack would end fatally, and it was only out of regard for Mrs. Miles that he continued to administer the gas."

2 WOMEN HELD WITH ROBBERS

Detroit, April 5 (AP)—Three bank robberies, the holdup of a hospital payroll, were believed to have been solved today by the arrest of a gang of five men and two women, one of the latter a former nurse.

Those under arrest are Ruth Jones, 23-year-old former student nurse at Providence Hospital; Edith Casppiues, 35; Ralph Benham, Leonard Kovie nad Samuel Thomas and Harry Boroo. The members of the gang have confessed most of the robberies, police said.

Gave Cash to Anti Cause

John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, arch foe of prohibition, is shown as he appeared on the stand before the Senate lobby committee for questioning in connection with the Association Against Prohibition. He admitted donating $64,500 to the cause.

PARLEY, DYING, PLANS SESSION

away the obstacles preventing formulation of a five-power treaty.

Decision to give the conference another few days' lease on life as a five-power body was reached by M. Briand, Premier MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson at a long meeting at James Palace this morning. They agreed to devote a few days more to political negotiations in the faint hope of agreement.

Unless success rewards their efforts by the end of next week, negotiations for a five-power treaty will be definitely abandoned.

The conference probably will result in a fornight in a three-power treaty.

It is thought possible that the nations represented here may agree to meet again in the summer at a place to be selected to discuss the highly important issues that have come up here relative to the peace organization of Europe.

The Americans have tentatively arranged for passage home April 22. Before they leave they most likely will sign a treaty with Japan and Britain. In the meantime, a sincere effort will be made to iron out the ruffled European situation and lay plans for probable political discussions in the near future.

money saving souls with so little appreciation.

The tu quoque is never very effective, but consider some superstitions that our good missionaries have to combat. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, traveling with moving picture cameras around the world, bring this from the Far East.

In Polynesia, the marriageable young women parade before priests of the devil-devil gods, the latter having been violently serenaded for a week in advance to get their attention.

Lightly clad, the young ladies are smeared with cocoanut oil, and as they pass a devil-devil priest scrapes off a little oil from each girl's back. The oil is analyzed, in the devil-devil god's sanctum, and the priest tells the young woman she may marry now, or must wait a year.

Among those heathen, to question the accuracy of that back-scraping method is as serious an offense as it is to doubt Jonah's trip, among good American fundamentalists.

450 GUESTS ON LEVIATHAN FOR TRIP TO N. Y.

With Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, among 450 guests, the re-conditioned steamer Leviathan, left South Boston drydock today for her trip around the Cape to New York.

Tunney arrived with more than 300 other guests, on a special train from New York, chartered by President Paul W. Chapman of the United States Lines, operators of the vessel.

The Leviathan was equipped with a night club and talkie movies here, in addition to being given semi-annual overhauling and primping.

FIRST "WHEEL TO KEEL."

The arrival of the special train from New York and its shunting up to the side of the vessel at the drydock marked the first "wheel to keel" mode of embarkation ever used in the country.

When the train reached the siding, a special gangplank was thrown out so that the guests could board the liner direct from the train. Officials said that this is the only port where such a procedure is practical.

OTHERS ON BOARD

L. C. and Roscoe Prior, hotel operators; Attorney Francis Carney, Maj. Thomas L. Walsh, H. O. Bright, banker; Thomas Logan, vice-president Federal National Bank; J. T. O'Brien, George L. Graham of the American Wool Company, F. L. Putnam of the F. L. Putnam Company, J. W. Smith, vice-president of the Boston & Maine; Charles F. Webb, steamship broker; Capt. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles of Massachusetts.

T. A. Robertson, managing editor of Boston American; B. J. Fortune, vice-president National Shawmut Bank; John V. Moore, president Moore Fabric Company; Richard Parkhurst, secretary Boston Port Authority; J. H. Selden, president Selden Worsted Mills; Vaughn Jealous, wool merchant, were aboard.

In addition, the party which will be accompanied by W. A. McIsaac, general agent of the United States Lines, will include Roy Howard and Carl Bickel of the United Press; Kent Cooper, head of the Associated Press; Bernard Gimbel, accompanying Gene Tunney; Gen. J. Leslie Kincaid, head of the United Hotels; Karl Kitchen, Neal O'Hara, Harry Acton, newspaper columnists; Representative M. Lankford, Admiral L. C. Palmer and E. P. Killed Saving Dog

New York, April 5—Lawrence Murtha, 6, was run over and killed while saving his toy dog from the wheels of a truck.

High Spots Bobbing Up in Harbor Floor

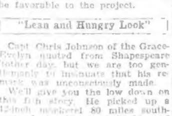
Present Dangerous Conditions Show 35-Foot Depth Should Be Kept

Steamship interests are hoping that the state department of public works will make an early start on clearing the inner harbor of certain shoals menacing shipping.

Several days ago the big liner concerns asked the Maritime Association of the Chamber of Commerce to appear at the hearing before the State Department.

Complaints were made that "shoals" have recently appeared off India and Central wharfs on the Boston side, and off the Cunard and Leyland wharfs on the East Boston coast.

In the opinion of the Chamber and the Boston port authority, the harbor should constantly be maintained at not less than 35 feet. Present conditions are dangerous, and oblige the B[illegible]or and New York liners, as well as others, to zig-zag their way to the landing piers to avoid the ever-swelling bars of sand and rubbish.



CHEST
that zigzag course

Not only is there actual risk of grounding, but another problem has also come to the front. Because of the shoals, certain big freight ships cannot take full capacity if they wish to be able to leave the harbor.

The entire inner harbor should be surveyed, in the opinion of shipping people. The state will do the dredging involved. The department of public works is understood to be favorable to the project.

PORT OF BOSTON

By CARL MORRISON

Greetings, Mr. Conry

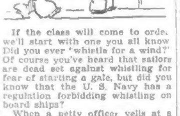
Shipping people have a friend in Joseph A. Conry, the new traffic commissioner of Boston. Mayor Curley made a ten-strike on this appointment, for Mr. Conry is a noted authority on harbor traffic.

When he was a member of the board of port directors, this is what a newspaper said of him:

"He is thoroughly acquainted with the harbor, knowing practically every shoal, rock and current. When in 1896, as president of the Boston City Council he went with a local delegation to Washington, he surprised the Congressional committee by his intimate knowledge of the port."

Tie That Canary Up

Our casual "expose" of the superstition of certain Boston fishermen in refusing to turn their ships "against the sun" for fear of causing a disaster, started something. We have been showered with other such traditions, and will pass on a few from day to day.



If the class will come to order we'll start with one you all know. Did you ever "whistle for a wind?" Of course you've heard that sailors are dead set against whistling for fear of starting a gale, but did you know that the U. S. Navy has a regulation forbidding whistling on board ships?

When a petty officer yells at a greenhorn on his first cruise, to "tie that canary up," the officer is not superstitious. He is merely guarding against whistling noises which might be confused with the boatswain's signal whistle.

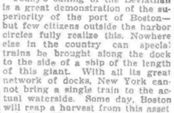
Ahoy, Cap'n Gaspar Bacon

Not because he is ashamed, but rather because he is too modest, has our popular Senate president concealed the fact that his great boyhood ambition of being a sea captain has been achieved. Gaspar Bacon has been made a member of the Boston Marine Society, the oldest organization of its kind in the world.

Cap'n Bacon's great-grandfather was president of this famous society of master mariners in 1837.

Those Pious Sailors

The new Italian super-liner to be built soon with ten decks, 99,000-horsepower and displacement of 45,000 tons, will have a theater, a garage, two swimming pools and a church.



This church feature is something new, and reminds us of a recent occurrence in Boston. The boy graduates of the Nantucket training-ship were all given Bibles by a religious organization, and only one of the entire 21 students threw his Bible away. Perhaps the modern salt will head his list of choice possessions with a Bible, instead of the old-time harmonica, loaded dice, marked deck of cards or one clean "goin' ashore shirt."

STEAMSHIP NOTES

Today's sailing of the Leviathan is a great demonstration of the superiority of the port of Boston—but few citizens outside the harbor circles fully realize this. Nowhere else in the country can special trains be brought along the dock to the side of a ship of the length of this giant. With all its great network of docks, New York cannot bring a single train to the actual waterside. Some day, Boston will reap a harvest from this asset.

A New York dispatch reports that bids will be submitted in the next few days by several New England builders, for the construction of three passenger ships for the Eastern Steamship Lines. The vessels will be of steel and will carry 700 passengers each. They are reported to be planned for extra travel between Boston, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The White Star liner Majestic, en route east from New York, has in operation a ship-to-shore telephone service. Last December connection was made with the Leviathan. Today the service is out of the freak stage. Until far at sea, passengers can talk for three minutes for $21, with $7 for additional minutes.

The new motorship, Lafayette, of the French lines which will begin operation from Boston in the not-distant future, has been accepted from the builders. According to cable advices, the trial was marked by a noticeable lack of vibration, even when full speed was maintained.

"Lean and Hungry Look"

Capt. Chris Johnson of the Grace-Evelyn quoted from Shapespeare 'tother day, but we are too gentlemanly to insinuate that his remark was unconsciously made.

We'll give you the low down on this fish story. He picked up a 12-inch mackerel 80 miles southeast of the Highland Light, and turned the two-year-old fish over to the fisheries bureau to study, as this was the first caught.

At this time of the year mackerel are very thin and wild from awakening hunger pangs after their winter hibilation. They can be caught only on darkest of nights.

To get back to the point, Capt. Johnson said: "He has a lean and hungry look."

Today the North German Lloyd steamship, Karlsruhe, was scheduled to begin her first 1930 sailing. Once a month this service to Galway and Bremen will be furnished.

Japan Sees 3-Power Naval Accord as Only Hope Now

Tokyo, April 5 (AP)—Premier Hamaguchi, entraining at Tokyo for Okitsu to visit the sick Prince Saionji, today told reporters the government was confident of an early conclusion of a tripartite naval treaty at London, although still awaiting word on a final agreement concerning Japan's submarine fleet.

The premier said the government had not yet considered the matter but that the navy's claims of an improvement in the defense system within the new limits naturally would be studied fully.

The vernacular newspapers today prominently displayed reports that the navy will ask 60,000,000 yen (about $30,000,000) for a five-year period to increase naval aviation facilities from the present 17 squadrons to 28 squadrons of planes, a total of 1000 aircraft.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Subscription Dinner-Dance Planned for April 25

THE MOST IMPORTANT SOCIAL event so far on the April calendar is the subscription dinner-dance to be held at the Ritz-Carlton the Friday evening after Easter. The smart set will be there in new spring evening attire and the sophistication only indulged in by the young married set. Mrs. John Lawrence, Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Mrs. Harcourt Amory and Mrs. Thomas S. Blumer are among the names on the invitations.

A VERY FASHIONABLE AUDIENCE is expected to attend the concert of the Eighteenth Century Symphony Orchestra to be given tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 in Jordan Hall. The orchestra will appear in Colonial costume and play rare old scores by candlelight. The soloist will be Mrs. Henry L. Higginson (Betty Bird), soprano. In keeping with the orchestra, the ushers will wear 18th century costumes. Miss Katherine Cunningham Gray will be in charge of this group, which includes the Misses Louise Perkins, Edith White, Eleanor White, Priscilla Belknap, Louise Adamo, Eleanor Harrington and Winifred White. Among the patronesses are Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Mrs. G. S. Curtis, Dr. and Mrs. Seth Arnold, Mrs. G. M. Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Dabney, Mr. H. R. Dalton, Mr. John H. Ellis, Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham, Mrs. Curtis Guild.

ALSO ON THE LIST ARE Dr. Lewis H. Jack, Mrs Carl F. Kaufman, Mrs. Hattie H. Wagner, Mrs. F. S. Whitwell, H. C. Spain, Col. and Mrs. Edward Eldredge, Dr. and Mrs. George S. Badger, Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Brackett, Dr. and Mrs. Lincoln Davis, Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Adamo, Mrs. John A. Sullivan, Mrs. William J. Prendergast, Mrs. D. W. Quill, Mr. and Mrs. William B. F. Lee, Miss Sadie E. Murray, Misses Margaret and Lillian Shoulder, Donald Tupper, Miss Sarah A. Ginn, Charles King, Miss Catherine Dermody, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ginty, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Spence, Mrs. Evelyn Johnson, Miss Mae E. Rich, Mrs. Katherine A. Hager, Miss Louise Gunn, John Colleran, Miss Annie Allen, Miss Ina G. Aiken, Miss Mary T. Dwyer, Robert McGowan, Miss Winifred White, Mrs. Emma Schumann, Noel J. Carroll, Mrs. J. E. McNamara, Mr. and Mrs. John F. O'Brien, Mrs. John B. Byrne and Mrs. Nona Croxford.

Film Showing Planned as Fund Benefit

MISS ANNE CLIFFORD OF the Junior League is to be in charge of the ushering and Mrs. Robert M. Blackall of Milton is serving as chairman of tickets for the production, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," to be given in the Exeter Street Theater, Saturday morning, April 26, under the auspices of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union for the benefit of the Employes' Association Fund. This film, made in Europe and never before shown in Boston, was featured at the annual dinner of the National Board of Review in New York, of which Dr. George W. Kirchway and Wilson Barrett are officers. The large company of invited guests then present immensely enjoyed Queen Titania, Robin Goodfellow, Puck and Oberon, Snug Quince and Starveling, not to mention Pyramus and Thisbe, as they disported themselves on the screen in this most delightful of Shakespeare's comedies originally written to be part of the festivities of a nobleman's nuptials. To supplement the feature film, there will be shown "Spring," "Summer" and "Autumn" of the "Silly Symphony" series which have so delighted old and young.

DOWN AT THE CENTERVILLE section of Beverly, "Where the North Shore Begins," the new covered tennis court is completed and about half of the subscribers gathered for the first matches. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. William Endicott, Q. A. Shaw McKean, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2nd., Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert L. Steward, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stockton, Mrs. Neil W. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Robb and Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr.

Mrs. Joseph Hamlen Sails on Leviathan

MRS. JOSEPH R. HAMLEN (Martha Thorndike) of Brookline is sailing today on the S. S. Leviathan for New York. A number of Boston business men will be aboard as passengers. Mrs. John S. Lawrence is leaving Aiken and will be at home Monday. Lloyd Nichols and Morgan Plummer of the Beverly Farms colony are returning this month from a trip abroad. They took their car with them and motored out to the battlefields. They will sail on the Homeric, April 12.

Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Mrs. Francis Bacon Lothrop, Mrs. George L. Batchelder, Jr., and Mrs. Moses Williams are among the arrivals at the Berkshire in New York. Mrs. George A. Talbot is at the Seaside Hotel at Atlantic City. Sailing on the Bermuda today are Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Cabot, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Adie, Jr., and F. L. Gates.

MRS. HENRY W. PEABODY, after spending the winter in Florida, has arrived at Green Walls, her home in Montserrat, where as usual she devotes much of her time and interest in several of the nationally known public welfare movements. Parramatta, at Montserrat, was the first of the summer homes to be opened this season. Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Peabody have come from New York and are settled there for the summer. Mrs. S. Warren Sturgis and her daughter, Edith, are sailing for Europe for the summer. They will take in the "Passion Play" and buy vanities for Miss Edith's trousseau, arriving home the middle of August. The wedding is announced for October.

Miss Virginia Taylor was in charge of the ushers for the Agnes DeMille dance recital last evening at Symphony Hall, which was a brilliant social event. Miss Taylor came out in the season of 1928-1929. She is manager of the usher corps of the Junior League.

Hold Services for Dead Ambassador

Berlin, April 5 (INS)—Memorial services for the late Albert H. Washburn, former United States ambassador to Austria, were held by the Anglo-American colony here today. Washburn's widow and son attended.

Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador to Vienna and a close friend of Washburn, paid tribute to the life and career of the dead diplomat. Official services were to be held this afternoon, attended by President Miklas, members of the German Cabinet and diplomatic corps.

Edward L. Geary Is Reported Better

Considerable improvement was noted today in the condition of Edward L. Geary, a partner in the banking house of Hornblower & Weeks for the past 28 years, who is seriously ill at his home at 76 H st., South Boston. According to those in attendance, he has apparently passed the crisis of his illness. Mr Geary began his career as an office boy with Hornblower & Weeks and gradually advanced until, in 1902, he was made a member of the firm.

Graduation Speakers

Edward A. Hogan of Natick and James F. Mahoney of South Boston have been officially announced as the graduation speakers at the Boston College commencement, which takes place early in June.

LAYMEN HOLD MEETINGS

Lawrence, April 5—Meetings of the lyamen's association featured the third day of the 65th annual session of the East German conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church being held here this week.

The executive comimttee met in the First German M. E. Church and the annual meeting was held in the afternoon at the German Presbyterian Church. In the evening there was a mass meeting addressed by former Edward O. Childs of Newton, who spoke on "The Value of the Church to the Community."

Picks Good American Name—It's Sam Levy

New Haven, Ct., April 5 (AP)—To a census enumerator he gave his name as Sam Levy and his birthplace as Italy.

"But how," he was asked, "did you acquire the name of Sam Levy?"

"When I come to this country," was the reply, "I want a good American name, so I had my friend look in a directory and there was a lot of Levys. So I take the name."

WILL RESTORE OLD HOUSES

More than 700 residents attended Dorchester's first "town meeting" in 200 years which was held in Dorchester high school, Codman sq., last night. With ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald as moderator, many plans were drawn up for the month of June.

The committee decided to reproduce many old landmarks in Dorchester, namely the old houses and the historical fort on top of Old Hill, now known as Savin Hill. It was announced that the mayor of Dorchester, England, would be the guest of honor during the two days known as Dorchester days, June 6 and 7.

Mayor Sends Word to Byrd of Welcome

Capt. Hilton H. Railey, Boston representative of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, prior to leaving today for Panama to greet Byrd, asked Mayor Curley if he had any word to send, and the mayor requested that the explorer be informed Boston expects him here for a public welcome in June.

Fine Workmanship Key to Beauty of Young Girls' Garb

THE junior mode is most attractive when fashioned of sheer, washable fabrics, and embellished with touches of fine handwork and embroidery. The secret of the charm of French clothes is the fine workmanship, and attention to the most minute detail.

And since dimity, viole, dotted swiss, organdie and embroidered batiste are being revived for grown-ups this season, delectable little frocks of these materials for children assume added style importance for very young ladies, who look positively cherubic in their fresh daintiness.

The little frock pictured is of fine white voile, embroidered in small figures of pink and blue. The fullness on the shoulders is pressed into straight pleats; while the round neck, and small cap sleeves are finished with a corded edge, caught to the dress by hand-fagoting in white and blue. A fagoted design extending a few inches from the right shoulder is balanced by a cord bow of blue and white on the left.

BLUES are decidedly popular this spring, and most becoming to the blue eyed golden haired young miss. The very youthful young man pictured is garbed for outdoor sporting events in a typical English flannel blazer gaily striped in vivid colors, worn over a wash suit, with shorts, and completed by a corded wool beret, worn at a rakish angle, lisle socks, with turn-over cuffs and oxford shoes.

"She was such a plain child!" How many radiantly lovely young things who have had that remark made about them can credit their present beauty to diligent grooming throughout the growing-up years!

TO say that the care of a child's beauty should begin in the cradle is no exaggeration. Beautiful complexions are the result of correct diet and good care when a baby first makes her worldly debut. Grace and poise, both, should be assiduously cultivated over the period of one's youth. You may meet opposition in the little daily beauty tasks which you impose upon your child, but if you exercise patience and skill in presenting each one they will soon become as much a part of her day as eating and sleeping.

DE MILLE AT SYMPHONY

AGNES DE MILLE and Warren Leonard, dancers, and Frank Parker, diseur, gave an unusual program for the benefit of the North Bennet Street Industrial School, at Symphony Hall last night.

As designated in advance sheets, this turned out to be really an "entertainment." There was a pervading attempt to amuse the audience, first of all. And this was most successfully accomplished. Miss de Mille especially shone in this connection, for she displayed a genuine talent for mimicry and satire.

Only incidentally did she employ her dancing talent, which is a well-developed one. Mr. Leonard as well, both in solo dances and paired with Miss de Mille, was primarily a mime rather than a dancer. Together they perpetrate a delicious bit of satire in "May Day."

Mr. Parker specialized in recitations in French and English, acting them out with great gusto. A good-sized audience received the program enthusiastically.

Medical Center Fund Near Half Way Mark

The New England Medical Center Fund ends the week with $743,550 in its drive to raise $1,500,000 building and endowment fund, according to a report from the fund headquarters today. It represents 1945 subscriptions from friends of Boston Dispensary, Boston Floating Hospital and Tufts College Medical School, which will form the medical center.

The New England Conservatory of Music will donate its sixth program over the air tomorrow night, when a string ensemble will give a half-hour program from station WHDH beginning at 6:30.

Coast-to-Coast Cruisers Near Hub

Portsmouth, N. H., April 5 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Les Morrison, who left Portland, Me., April 1 for Portland, Ore., in a 16-foot outboard motorboat, arrived here today, ending the first 100 miles of their scheduled 6400-mile cruise.

The couple stopped only long enough to obtain weather reports from the Portsmouth harbor coast guard station, and before leaving for Gloucester, Mass. Adverse weather had delayed their craft ever since their start, they said. They expect to make the cruise in four months.

U. S. Contracts for 252 Plane Engines

Washington, April 5 (AP)—The army air service today announced award of contracts for 252 air cooled direct drive Hornet airplane engines to the Pratt & Whitney Co. of Hartford, Conn. The price will be $1,450,570.72.

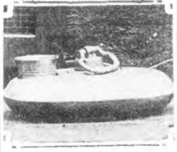
They will be placed in bombardment planes recently ordered from the Keystone Aircraft Corp., of Bristol, Pa.

Bricklayers Will Get $1.55 an Hour

Lowell, April 5 (AP)—A strike affecting about 40 bricklayers here was settled today with an agreement with contractors under which the workmen will receive $1.55 an hour and work a five-day 40-hour week. They asked for $1.65 an hour. Previously they were paid $1.50 an hour and worked 44 hours.

Daily Antique

No. 64



Another interesting article from the large collection of Colonial and early American pieces owned by T. G. Washburn of 1 Creek sq., Boston, is shown today.

The utensil pictured is an unusual piece of pewter ware. It is probably the first adaptation of the thermos idea. The vessel, equipped with double stoppers, is made to hold about a quart of hot water, which served to keep warm the contents of a mugful of beverage, possibly hot punch. The pewter mug containing the drink rests in a receptacle in the heating vessel.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, provided the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

Children Take Part in First Bird Walk

Early arrivals of robins and bluebirds in Jamaica Plain and Brookline were greeted by enthusiastic friends today when a group of Boston school children, under the auspices of the Children's Museum, took their first bird walk of the season through those suburbs.

The event marked the opening of the weekly walk schedule and started the series of contests for amateur and professional bird lovers to test their powers of observation and remembrance of birds they saw on their tour. Miss Madelene Sawyer, curator of the educational section of the museum was in charge of today's walk.

Rich Mrs. Thorne, 66, Is Dead in Chicago

Chicago, April 5 (AP)—Mrs. Katherine Comstock Thorne, prominent socially, and widow of the late William C. Thorne, vice-president of Montgomery, Ward & Co., is dead. She was 66 years old and had been an invalid for years.

Mrs. Thorne inherited an estate estimated at $3,000,000 upon her husband's death. She later married William C. Camp, a bond salesman.

In 1922 she began action to secure an accounting of the estate which she had left to Camp to manage and to revoke a $350,000 trust fund she had established for him. These suits ended with a divorce.

HITS ELDERS AT SESSION

Addressing the evening session of the 135th New England conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in the Epworth Church, Cambridge, Dr. William S. Ovard, asserted that he does not blame modern youth for revolting when the elders tell them to think for themselves.

Dr. Ovard, who is secretary of the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal church, advocated world brotherhood. "It is the duty and purpose of this and succeeding generations to work for brotherhood," he said.

"The church may not be considered responsible for the advancement of brotherhood, as economic prosperity will force it."

He said that the church must furnish ideals to replace animal activities with the cultural and scored supporters of biological heredity, terming them "monumental and egotistical." Dr. William S. Mitchell presided.

Radcliffe Girl to Wed Harvard Man

A romance of Harvard and Radcliffe was revealed today by the filing of marriage intentions at Cambridge City Hall by William Benton Bowers, 2d, and Miss Rosamond Forbes. The wedding is to be April 12 at the home of Miss Forbes' parents, Gerry's Landing, Cambridge, the Rev. Vivian Pomeroy of Milton to officiate.

Ice Goes Out; Spring Now Here

Willsboro, N. Y., April 5 (AP)—The ice went out of Lake Champlain last night at the widest point, between Willsboro Point, N. Y., and Burlington, Vt. The clearing was nine days later than a year ago. This particular ice movement is generally considered as marking the end of wintry weather in this northern country.

COHAN MAY NOW TAKE THE BOW

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

SOMEBODY should tell the truth about George M. Cohan. The idea is not new: it has been tried before with what you might call measurable results. But, somehow, Mr. Cohan's best biographers, like Charlie Washburn as an example, have skimmed only the surface instead of sinking teeth into the subject and making it an item of major importance. Which, however you read it, should convince every paying guest at the nation's box offices that George M. Cohan for some time has been the theater's most distinguished servant.

Nicholas Young

AIMLESS shots in the dark do not bring down the biggest game. It is, therefore, no blind sniping that picks off Mr. Cohan as the drama's best hope for early deliverance. Manhattan's brilliant critic, Percy Hammond, already has proclaimed George M. Cohan as America's best actor. I am inclined to agree with him, with certain inconsequential reservations. If Mr. Hammond had said that Mr Cohan had become the American theater's finest influence, making full allowance for Cohan activities, thither and yon, I would have cried "Hallelujah! Amen!"

* * *

ONLY once in a generation may any branch of the arts hope to bring forth in one man so many diversified gifts. If you should consult the best "Who's Who" of the theater you would find that Mr. Cohan is listed as actor, dramatic author, composer and manager. A fairly broad field of endeavor in which to excel, you might say. Not only broad but deep, with the records showing Cohan standing guard at every corner; the bold sentinel unafraid. Many men in this generation have written better plays than Cohan has scribbled. Distinguished names like Augustus Thomas, Charles Klein and Bayard Veiller may be mentioned. But not one of these could write a play and then act its principal role.

SO much for the scrivening of George M. Cohan. Now you may take his measure as an actor. John Barrymore, undoubtedly, is a better reader of lines; a more impressive strutter. But he never could, we believe, have written "A Prince There Was," "The Song and Dance Man," "The Merry Malones" and "Gambling." Then, like a Minute Man of old, leap into the leading role and array each or any of them into an artistic success.

* * *

NO man in the theater of today, or of the more recent yesterdays, has done so many things well; no disciple of Thespis and her consorts has given the wary playgoer so much that he might enjoy without blush. If there were more Cohans there would be better drama.

ELIZABETH PRATT
MISS PRATT is one of the E. E. Clive players in "D. C. M." now at the Copley.

GIRLS, HERE'S THE PRINCE!

REGINALD OWEN, who has received high praise for his portrayal of Prince Rudolf in "Candle-Light," Gilbert Miller's hilarious farce, which opens Monday at the Wilbur, made his first appearance in America as Prince Albert in "The Swan." It was an auspicious beginning, for his work and the play were both received with great enthusiasm in Boston, and everywhere else it was presented. The following year he appeared in "The Carolinian," and next went into the Theater Guild production of "Little Eyolf," which failed, however, to gain popular approval. During 1926 he toured with Cyril Maude in "These Charming People."

Reginald Owen

Thereafter he enjoyed a long run as Cardinal Richelieu in "The Three Musketeers."

BEETHOVEN IS FEATURE AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

FESTIVAL programs have been so common at the Symphony concerts this year that they have almost become the rule rather than the exception, as they should be. After the Brahms orgy—and a most delectable orgy it was—of a little more than a week ago comes this week's all-Beethoven program.

The connecting link is the appearance as soloist of Artur Schnabel, extraordinary German pianist, who was the great light of the Brahms Festival. In Beethoven's G major Concerto he had a "vehicle" even less virtuoso-piece than the two Brahms Concertos. For here is more of the serene, musing, melodic Beethoven than the composer of heroic heights and passionate depths.

Mr. Schnabel played this music in what we conceive to be Beethoven's spirit, with measured pace, infinite care and with ravishingly beautiful touch. The section of thrills in the slow movement was rendered so poetically, yet so unsentimentally, that a sort of ethereal sigh went up from the audience when he had finished the movement.

The pianist was recalled by applause several times at the close of the concerto. The demonstration was not stormy, as he has experienced several times recently in Boston. But then, one does not shout after this concerto. Mr. Koussevitzky, who contributed notable efforts, shared in the last round of this applause.

The balance of the program consisted of the "Pastorale" Symphony and the Third "Leonore" Overture. Although all this music was finely played by the orchestra under Mr. Koussevitzky, the program was unsufficiently varied. Only the overture at the end relieved an hour and a half of mostly "quiet" Beethoven.

CANDLES FOR THE MUSIC

THE Eighteenth Century Symphony Orchestra, Raffaele Martino, conductor, will give a Tercentenary concert of ancient music by candlelight, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 in Jordan Hall. The orchestra will wear colonial costumes. Mrs. Henry Lee Higginson, soprano, will be the soloist and will be accompanied by orchestra and harpsichord.

The program includes Gavotte, by Lulli; Canzone and Fuga, by Frescobaldi; Puritan Psalms, Batti Batti, by Mozart; Gia il sole dal Gange, by Scarlatti; Farewell Symphony, by Haydn, (in the last movement of which the musicians, one at a time, blow out their candles and depart); Concerto in A Minor, by Vivaldi; The Muses in the Forest, by De Flagny; The Little Windmills, by F Couperin; Concerto in D Minor, (for two pianos, organ and orchestra), by J. S. Bach; Minuet, by A. Exaudet; My Days Have Been So Wondrous Free, (first song written in America by the American composer), F. Hopkinson; and Sinfonia Orazi e Curiazi, by D. Cimarosa.

The concert is for the benefit of the Headquarters and Welfare Fund of Oliver Ames, Jr., Post 117, American Legion.

Schelling Concerts

The renewal of subscriptions for next season's series of four Saturday morning Ernest Schelling concerts is well under way. The first program will take place early in December.

MA'S SYMPATHY HELPS GIRL TO WIN OVER PAPA STONE

By DOROTHY STONE

Co-starring with Fred Stone in "Ripples" at the Colonial, April 21.

EVER since I was old enough to think for myself, my one ambition was to go on the stage. I watched my father and mother every time I was taken to the theater as a child. I knew my father had said that he didn't want me to become an actress, but still I persisted in the hope that he might change his mind. Mother told me to be patient and work hard if I was ever to demonstrate that I had some ability, and so I set out to learn some of his dances.

Dorothy Stone

FASCINATING work it was and I kept at it for several years, encouraged by the sympathy and advice of my mother. Then, when I was about 12 years old, I staged a tryout for my parents. They were sitting in the front room of our house in Amityville, L. I., and I went up and knocked on the window. "Watch me," said I, and then I danced for my father as I had never danced and never expect to again. I did every step I had learned, and when I had finished, father grabbed his cap and remarked that if I could do that well without instructions it was about time I had some lessons. And right there began the preparations for my stage career. I made a bargain with my parents that I would go through high school before making my debut, and for five years I certainly led a double life, as schoolgirl and would-be actress.

"It was during that winter that we began work on the cane dance that you saw in the second act of "Stepping Stones" and have never stopped practicing it ever since. Father always told me that the secret of success was hard work, so I have always worked on that principal.

"Then in "Criss Cross" when Mr. Dillingham elevated me to a co-starring berth with my dad it was much harder. Then when Dad crashed in his plane and Will Rogers came East and did his pinch-hitting so we could go on in "Three Cheers," it was harder than ever. I was alone without Dad and although Uncle Will did all he could to help me, that terrific personality of his with his lovable character made it doubly hard. But it was great experience and it has helped me considerably.

There's a Lilt to Every Link

THIS CAST GOT STAGE FARE IN THE WAR

THE medal of honor for bravery on the battlefield, providing the motive for "D. C. M.," E. E. Clive's new play at the Copley, holds a very real meaning for several members of the cast. Military men are reticent about personal deeds of valor, but war records recently disclosed that many of the cast had covered themselves with glory during the World War.

A look at the record finds Francis Compton with the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, for three years in active service, severely wounded and recuperating in a base hospital very like the one staged in "D. C. M." Before the armistice was signed, Mr. Compton was awarded the same Distinguished Conduct Medal, for which the youthful hero of the play so bravely strives.

Ralph Roberts, appearing as the genial and understanding Reverend Soames, went back to England from the Philippines to join as a private the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, and at the end of the war was honorably discharged with the rank of captain in the famous York and Lancaster.

Hannam Clark, who portrays the laconic Capt. Russell, has a four-year service record with the Royal Engineers, with two years up in the front line trenches. Ian Emery was far too young to join up in 1914, but he feels right at home in a uniform nevertheless, for his early days found him in England's military schools, preparing for a commission.

For Elspeth Dudgeon, too, "D. C. M." brings back memories of service days. At Abbeville, on the edge of the Cressy Forest, Miss Dudgeon spent two of the war years with Lina Asheville's group of entertainers.

BABE STOPPED THE SHOW

REALISM in the theater is a fine thing, but there is such a thing as carrying realism just a step too far, as the cast of Crosby Gaige's production, "Little Accident," the comedy at the Plymouth, learned much to its chagrin. A bundle of rags is used, or was until a recent performance, in lieu of a real baby throughout the action of the play, which recites humorously the trials and tribulations of an unmarried father.

A friend came to visit Rachel Hartzell in her dressing-room just before curtain time, to show off her six-months' old baby. Miss Hartzell begged for the sake of realism to be permitted to use the baby for one scene in the play. The baby became so frightened that it cried incessantly, with the result that the players could not go on with the scene until the rag doll was expeditiously substituted.

Crosby Gaige, who had been watching the scene from the back of the orchestra, came tearing to the stage to discover what had happened.

"I did it for realism," confessed Miss Hartzell.

"You certainly got it," said Mr. Gaige. 'Hereafter, if we want to use a real baby we'll engage a midget."

Dorothy George

Dorothy George, mezzo-soprano, will give a recital in Jordan Hall next Thursday evening at 8:15, assisted by Heinrich Gebhard, composer-pianist, in the first public performance of his tone-poem, "Mountain Song."

FADE-OUT FOR SLIM LINES

"CERTAINLY, it's smart to be healthy," says Marie Prevost, featured player in "Ladies of Leisure," the Columbia all-talking drama now showing at the New B. F. Keith's. "The reducing mania seems to have passed, and just now there is a vogue for the healthy normal figure. There is decidedly less emaciation among flappers. In addition there is a growing interest in sports. This serves a double purpose. It keeps the figure down in a sane manner and it builds up the body."

The New Plays

WILBUR—"Candle-Light," a farce. Original version by Siegfried Geyer; American adaptation by P. G. Wodehouse. In the cast are Eugenie Leontovich, who is featured; also Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray, Jo Bradlee, Mildred Quigley, Elaine Arden and Milton Roberts. Staged by Reginald Owen; produced by Gilbert Miller.

TREMONT—George M. Cohan in "The Tavern." Revival of Cora Dick Gantt's satirical comedy. In the supporting cast are Robert Middlemass, Joseph Allen Mary Philips, Jack Leslie, Mida MacMillan, Isabel Baring, Douglas MacPherson, Edward F. Nannary and Harold Healy. Staged by Sam Forrest. Produced by Mr. Cohan.

MADLY THIS GAY WORLD SPINS ON

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THAT Westward Ho! spirit has ever been apple pie for the speeding cameras of Hollywood. The Westerns made snappy films in the old silent days, and now they're staging their come-back with a vengeance on the sound screen. Liberal doses of this atmosphere of the great open spaces make "Under a Texas Moon," a rapid-fire picture which should prove a box-office triumph for the Warners. It is spirited. It is colorful. And backing up its pep and its glamor it has a vastly entertaining tale of love and adventure.

Armida

"UNDER A TEXAS MOON" is now being shown at the Washington St. Olympia and Uptown. There are rare touches to its plot; it sweeps afar from the conventional, and often plunges into virgin patches, to the huge delight of the audience. Its central character is a gay caballero who is free of heart as well as fancy throughout his numerous escapades. He is ardent in his wooing, but as fickle as a honeybee among the flowers. This Don Juan of the Southwest is a dare-devil from the word go, and if a role can make a movie matinee idol, then Frank Fay should be "all set" for some time to come. You will remember him as the master of ceremonies of "Show of Shows."

BUT Mr. Fay's debut as a star of the talkies isn't by any means the only feature of this show. There are bigger names than his in the cast; an unusually large aggregation of them. One would suspect characters were made to order just to include some of these folk. And among the girls are some of Hollywood's most alluring. Raquel Torres, that soulfully sweet Mona Maris, Myrna Loy, the delightful Armida who got her big chance in "General Crack," and a captivating lassie, Betty Boyd, appear. On the masculine side, supporting the dashing Senor Fay, are to be noted Noah Beery, Fred Kohler, Charles Sellon, and Tully Marshall.

MICHAEL CURTIZ did the directorial trick for the production, and he may be proud of his achievement. He refuses to let the singing shove in the brakes on the action of his handiwork; and most of us know what a bore overmuch song has been in the movies for lo! these many months. Mr. Curtiz goes into high early and seldom suffers anybody or anything to slow him up. He keeps the throated cameras swinging, as is fitting, and he seems to be getting a huge "kick" himself out of the way these ladies and Don Juan Fay are conducting themselves.

* * *

YOU cannot help but find "Under a Texas Moon" most amusing. It commands itself as an excellent antidote for carking care and incidentally has a great deal of highclass motion picture matter in its makeup.

'VOLGA BOATMAN' TO BE SET TO MUSIC FOR TIBBETT

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, April 5.

TINKLING across the continent direct from New York, comes a most interesting little yarn. Some inspired soul at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had the idea that Cecil de Mille's "Volga Boatman" set to music would have a little bit of everything to appeal to Lawrence Tibbett's admirers.

To come quickly to the point without delay, "The Volga Boatman" has been purchased from Cecil De Mille and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will set it to music for Lawrence Tibbett.

Louella Parsons

He will play the colorful role that William Boyd created in the silent version and who is there among us who won't say it's a G-R-A-N-D idea.

Tibbett can keep his bushy, curly wig. If he were under my management I would never let him appear on the screen without it.

MARION DAVIES and Robert Leonard are going to be associated once again. Bob has directed "The Cardboard Lover," one of Marion's most amusing and successful pictures and now he will direct "Rosalie." Gene Markey is writing the scenario and working hard to get a story that will equal "The Gay Nineties." When "The Gay Nineties" was previewed the other night it went over with a real bang. Some of the scenes of "Rosalie" are laid in West Point and it wouldn't surprise me to see Marion's company transported to the military academy to get some genuine atmosphere. So far, Buster West, youthful comedian, is the only member of the company signed. "Rosalie" was one of Marilyn Miller's most successful musical comedies and it ought to be a screen musical comedy with real flavor.

I JUST didn't think Paramount would part with Zoe Akins after her work in "Sarah and Son." Why should they when she can turn out scripts as complete as that story? Anyway, all her troubles with Famous Players-Lasky have been settled and she has signed a contract with them. Her first assignment is "Rose of the Rancho" which will be put to music and which will feature Gary Cooper. I wonder if Gary is going to try to sing. I'll tell you it wouldn't surprise me to have Ben Turpin come out and essay a little song. They are all doing it.

HOLLYWOOD is wagering just what Rudolf Friml will do. He came out here to write the music for "Bride 66" and before the picture was even finished he decided he wanted to go to Europe and within a few hours he was on his way leaving "Bride 66" and Samuel Goldwyn with whom he had a contract, to go their ways alone. Sam isn't worried, however, for he has made other pictures and good pictures without Mr. Friml. As for "Bride 66" it was nearly finished anyway when Friml took French leave.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Irene Mayer lunching with Mrs. Schulberg at the Embassy and again being wished all sorts of good things on her approaching marriage. Mary Pickford trying her hair in 57 varieties for her next picture. Her hair dress ranged from styles from age 16 to 50 years. Lupe Velez in dashing black and white, leading Gary Cooper to the theater. John Farrow and Eric Von Stroheim lunching at the Embassy. Carlotta King in white, looking summery as she walked into the Embassy. Ronald Colman dashing up the boulevard in a roadster and having half of the women turn to look at him. Constance Talmadge in Jim's Beauty shop getting special attention. Adolphe Menjou calling for his wife at the same place. Norma Shearer lunching at the Ambassador. That's all today.

JUST JAUNTY WITH THE 'JARVEY'

THAT picturesque and precarious vehicle, the Irish jaunting car, so popular with tourists in Ireland, and seen in the John McCormack picture, "Song o' My Heart," now at the Majestic, has a rather romantic history. Its evolution can be traced back to the 17th century in Dublin, when sedan chairs, capable of holding two, three and sometimes four persons, were carried through the streets of the city. One of these chairs is still to be seen at the Dublin Mansion House.

It is recorded in the annals of Dublin that licenses were issued for these vehicles from an office in Hume st. The first horse drawn vehicles known as a back-to-back car, made its appearance on the streets of Dublin in 1750 This was a rather awkward conveyance and was both unsociable and uncomfortable. It gradually went out of favor, but not before it evolved the jaunting car on which the seats were arranged parallel, thus enabling the passengers to converse with each other.

THE BELDAME MADE TO SAY EVEN MORE

By JAMES T. POWERS

Appearing in "The Rivals" at Hollis

James T. Powers

WHAT should do done, and what should not be done, in old comedies, has long been a matter of discussion, and no two critics ever agree on a solution of the problem. Should we take liberties with the text, or should we stick to traditional business?

Although no one has, from his own experience, an exact idea of how the parts in "The Rivals" were played in Sheridan's time, nor how they were received by the public, there are a few critics who have a perfectly natural feeling of reverence for Sheridan's genius, and would prefer to see the play produced exactas as Sheridan wrote it.

If we should try to please them, alas! the manager would come forward with the two weeks' clause notice to close, and there would be no more performances.

LIFE JUST ONE GREAT RUSH

Francine Larrimore

THE passing of the one-night stand companies has meant to Francine Larrimore the loss of her alma mater, for it was one of these troupes in which she received her early training. The vivacious star of "Let Us Be Gay," which John Golden sends to the Hollis, beginning Easter Monday, treasures happy memories of her first season on the road. Following her success in "Over Night" on the road, Miss Larrimore appeared with Holbrook Blinn in a series of one-act plays. Then came long engagements in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," "Here Comes the Bride," "Fair and Warmer" and "Scandal."

When Humor Steps Upon the Screen, All Worries Flee

SHE TELLS THE WORLD

KATHRYN CRAWFORD

MISS CRAWFORD is the captivating star of "Hide Out," feature film at the Park.

IT'S A LEAD PIPE CINCH

GAYETY BILL HAS STAR

Marie Arnold

"SLIDING BILLY" Watson is the next Mutual burlesque attraction at the Gayety. The famous comedian and his own show will present their 1930 version of comedy, song and dance, on Monday. There will also be four all-star vaudeville acts. Eddie Murphy, who has been piling up records for himself all along the circuit, Frank Callahan, character man; Al Allen and George Montford are among the performers. It wouldn't be a Billy Watson show without plenty of feminine charm. Marie Arnold is the ingenue, Bonnie Lloyd is the prima donna and Esther Lang is the featured specialist. She and Montford are scheduled to present some unusual novelties.

There will be new scenery, new costumes and new situations throughout the whole show. Holub's Gayety jazz orchestra will be another feature.

Maurel in "Dixiana"

'GINGER GIRLS' AT HOWARD

Joan Collette

THE "Ginger Girls" burlesque holds forth for the entire week at the old Howard. Much interest will center in the personal appearance of Joan Collette, who is termed "the daintiest doll in burlesque." The show will introduce a Boston boy, Tommy Levene, who has a wealth of comedy material. Other stars include "Verne", Blanche Burnette, Mabel Lea, Vic Casele, Don Trent, Charley Robinson, Ed Wright and Harry Delmont. The show is made up of colorful scenes. The vaudeville bill will offer Amac, master illusionist; Joyner and Foster; and DeVito and Denny in comedy hits. The pictures will offer "She Goes to War" with Eleanor Boardman and Al St. John; "The Rescue," with Ronald Colman, and short subjects. The midnight show will be on Friday night.

"Call of West"

Tom O'Brien and Vic Potel have been signed by Columbia for roles in "Call of the West." Albert Ray is directing.

FILM FRENZY NEARLY GOT 'HIS GOAT'

By KING VIDOR

King Vidor

WELL, I've always wanted to make an all-Negro picture, and now that I've done it, I'd hate to have it turn out to be just one of these movies.

Since the public is so interested in sound and its uses, I selected and wrote a story which, I believe, is especially adapted to this new medium, a story of Negro life in the South, with an all-colored cast. You can't visualize a Negro without picturing the voices of workers in the cotton fields, and the moving cadence of Negro spirituals. And this picture has that quality.

It's the strangest experience a director ever had—unique, interesting—but a great wear and tear on one's emotions, directing a Negro picture.

Nobody can see hysteria, for instance, without catching a little of it. The scenes such as the wake, or the baptism scenes, where the colored actors actually go into a religious frenzy, are as hard on the director and cameraman as on the players. It is a remarkable proof of how the mental condition of a crowd becomes contagious.

The Negro is one of the greatest actors by nature, principally because he really doesn't act at all, but actually feels and experiences the emotions he seeks to portray.

CITY PLANNERS DEFEND CHARLES ST. CIRCLES

Daring Story of Eternal Love Triangle

Ardeth Carroll, beauty, lives in the drab home of her Aunt Stella. Neil Burke, downstairs, claims Ardeth as his. She is uncertain. She yearns for a fuller life. Ardeth sees the man of her dreams, Ken Gleason. Neil is furiously jealous. Jeanette Parker, society girl, plans to use Ardeth in a scheme for revenge. She opens a shop and engages Ardeth to run it. Ardeth sees that she can never marry Neil. Ken comes to the shop and meets Ardeth. Both are secretly impressed. Sunday they spend on Ken's houseboat. Their first kiss. Then Ardeth becomes jealous of Cecilie, Jeanett's sister. Ken tells her there is nothing to it, but later breaks an engagement and she imagines he is with her rival. She drives out to Tait's-on-the-Beach with Tom Corbett, who is in love with her, and there she sees Ken in the party with Cecilie.

CHAPTER 26

KEN'S words—sending a poison of despair stealing through her. . . . Not wild and rebellious despair which held bracing anger. This was a cold hand crushing down in her heart. Crushing hope.

She was face to face with the thing she feared. Here was the reason for that uncertainty which had lurked beneath her happiness. Fate had cornered her—and she could not fight back.

Her youth and beauty—they were weapons to wield against Cecile. But that threatening future had changed its appearance. No longer Cecile's beautiful, cynical face which opposed her. Cecile was a secondary menace now.

That unfriendly future had taken on the aspect of a frail old woman. A feeble woman who held the invincible weapon of helplessness.

Faint terror stealing through her . . . and the sick sense of being beaten.

"Well—that's the gist of it—" Ken's voice was tired and beaten. "I'll be frank. I forgot all about you, Ardeth, and our dinner engagement. I was like something crazy. Took all my wits to keep up in front of Mother. Mustn't let he. suspect . . . I had to go out to Cecile's dinner, of course, or she'd have begun to ask questions. When I met the others I sort of got a grip on myself. I remembered you. I got to a telephone. But you'd already left. And then I saw you out there with Tom."

"Oh, Ken—Ken"—she was groping for him, blind with regret and despair.

He patted her arm, but his eyes were absent and there was a grim set to his mouth.

"Ken"—her voice trembled. "I can't say how sorry I am. I didn't guess. I'm a jealous cat, I suppose . . . And while I was waiting, Tom passed. He asked me to go. I was nearly crazy—when you wait alone, every minute is a year, you know"——

He interrupted her halting voice. "I don't blame you, Ardeth. It—it just sort of got me, seeing you look up at Tom like that. But I should talk—I have no right"——

"Don't say that!" she cried sharply. "Oh, dearest—there's only you!" Heedless of passing cars, she flung her arms about him.

Ken was pale to the lips as he gently loosed her clasp. His eyes avoided her own—went for out to fasten on a red oil tanker nosing its way out the Gate. He spoke slowly, as though he had difficulty finding the words.

"I'm so damned miserable, Ardeth. I don't know how to say this. I've been thinking—going over and over last night in my mind until I'm nearly crazy. Seeing you, last night with Tom, sort of opened my eyes. He—he likes you, Tom does. I feel—oh, I feel like a dog in the manger"——

"Why?" her stiff lips would hardly form the word.

"To keep you from—from other fellows."

"Oh." Her hands were clasped so tightly that the knuckles were bloodless. "Oh" . . .

He turned on her with a sort of angry wildness. "No! You mustn't think that! That I don't care! There's nothing I wouldn't go through for you! I'd marry you tomorrow—but—there is mother. I can't break her heart. It would mean just that if I went to her and told her that you—that I—! Oh—of course she'd say she wanted me to be happy—that's the way with mothers. But she's set her heart on—on Cecile. She thinks she's doing the best thing for me. And how can I cross her now?"

The last, almost a groan.

"No—" she whispered. "No—you can't."

He went on more calmly. "Stall . . . That's what I've been doing. You know it! Hoping things will come right. If she had any one else—my father—or another son . . . I can't hurt her. And I have no right to ask you to wait—for years, maybe. . . . A girl like you—and old Tom more than half in love with you now."

Sweet and vivid relief shooting through her veins. Warming her to life—to a love which was pain.

"Oh—darling—" she was fumbling for his hand. "Is that all! Wait—Oh—for a hundred years! Any time, Ken, so it comes right for us in the end! I thought—Oh, I thought you didn't want me!"

"Want you." The husky roughness of his voice was music. "Wild about you, Moth. But—I'm caught!"

She was suddenly buoyant. "Ah, just for now! But some day things

Wakefield Will Decision Reversed

JUDGE GIVEN MILD REBUKE FOR ACTION

Supreme Court Declares He Closed His Mind to Fair Evidence

A mild rebuke was administered today by the Supreme Judical Court to Judge Collen C. Campbell of Barnstable county in reversing his decree allowing the will of Nannie E. Wyman of Wakefield in Middlesex court.

The will was contested by Harry F. Peck, the only heir-at-law and next of kin who was not mentioned in the testamentary bequests. He charged the document was forged.

In his appeal to the Supreme Court, Peck alleged Judge Campbell declared he was satisfied with the testimony of three lawyers, who testified the will had been duly executed, and nothing the handwriting expert called by the contestant would say could change his mind.

"If a judge reaches a decision on an issue of fact before the testimony on the issue is completed, and thus closes his mind to a fair consideration of competent evidence yet to be heard," wrote Judge Sanderson in the Supreme Court decree, "he has deprived the party of his right to a full and fair hearing upon the whole evidence.

"A desire on the part of a judge to expedite trials and avoid a waste of time is commendable, but upon record such a motive would not justify the trial judge in announcing his decision on the main issue in the case before he had fully heard competent witnesses which contestant was prepared and had a right to introduce."

NAB ARMED MAN WITH 2 MASKS

Armed with two fully loaded .45 automatic pistols, and with two masks in his possession, William F. Reilly, 20, of Oxford st., Lynn, was arrested today in the rear of a Baldwin st. lunch cart in that city and held later in $15,000 on four charges.

Reilly is alleged to have told Sergt. Frank Lawlor at police headquarters that if he had known the charges he was to face he would have "shot his way out" when cornered by Patrolman Thomas Ryan.

Police allege the two pistols were part of the loot taken in a break on an armory a few weeks ago and they also charge Reilly with two recent gasoline station holdups.

Reilly pleaded not guilty and was committed to jail in default of bail.

K. of C. and C. D. of A. to Have Breakfast

The annual communion breakfast of the Mgr. James J. Chittick Council, Knights of Columbus, and Father Stanton Court, Catholic Daughters of America, will be held tomorrow morning at the K. of C. building, Hyde Park, after the 8:30 mass.

CORBETT OFF TO AID LOVE 'KIDNAPERS'

Rich Hub Broker Still Loves His Wife; Regrets the Beating of Quinn

From a secluded spot in the plane of a friend, J. Morgan Corbett, Back Bay realtor and aviation enthusiast, flew to York today to "face the music" in the strange tale of a love kidnaping that brought the arrest of three men.

The men were arrested on complaint of James D. Quinn, a pilot, who was named by Corbett as the other man in divorce proceedings last November.

Quinn claimed he was lured to a camp in the Bronx and suffered a beating at the hands of the three men when he refused to tell the whereabouts of Mrs. Corbett, former Provincetown model and Wakefield school teacher. He charged the plot was instigated by Corbett.

Corbett spent the night at the home of his brother, James J. Corbett of Walnut st., Somerville.

Early today he left there, the brother said, to board the plane at a spot not even revealed to the brother, or his mother, who lives with James

STILL LOVES HIS WIFE.

The brother, however, revealed that the wealthy realtor is still madly in love with his pretty wife in spite of the marital troubles of last fall. And he deeply regrets the "over enthusiasm" displayed by the three arrested men in attempting to learn the whereabouts of Mrs. Corbett.

New York police professed to be up in the air concerning the affair but are still holding in custody Arthur Hamel, 29, Haverhill amateur flier; Edward Kendal, former operator of a flying service at North Reading, and Edward Klein a Brooklyn real estate salesman.

The three admit seeing Quinn at the camp, but deny beating him.

Mrs Corbett, the central figure in the weird story, has not appeared, but Corbett expects her to report to the New York police concerning the affair and the anxious husband is making the air trip in order to meet her there, according to the brother.

Quinn exhibited a broken nose, cut scalp and black eyes when he apeared at New York police headquarters to file complaint. The police arrested the trio later in a room at the Hotel Belmont, said to have been hired by Corbett.

FAVOR REPEAL IN CAMBRIDGE

An incomplete analysis of votes announced today in the Literary Digest prohibition poll showed a heavy balloting in favor of repeal in Cambridge and Brockton.

Balloting being recorded in Washington, D. C., showed 5062 for repeal, 2493 for enforcement and 3347 for modification.

The vote follows:

	Enf.	Mod.	Rep.	Total
Brockton......	715	578	1052	2345
Cambridge....	591	485	1045	2121

FALKSON CO. IN NEW QUARTERS

The story of the growth of a clothing firm, which after 35 years as manufacturers reorganized and continued business in the retail field, is embodied in the history of the Falkson Clothing Manufacturing Co. which reopens in new quarters at 104 Summer st.

Starting only two years ago as retailers, and located in a remote section of the city, this firm maintained a policy of selling low-priced men's clothes direct to the wearer. Despite the inconvenience of this location, the business developed rapidly. The new location and the splendid patronage already developed, makes the outlook of this firm exceedingly promising.

It is interesting to note that close to the spot on which the Falkson Clothing Manufacturing Co. is now located, Jacob Falkson, still active head, started manufacturing clothes 35 years ago. Many of the leading clothiers and department stores of the country were among his customers.

He was widely recognized for the superior workmanship and styles of the clothes which he produced, and is still maintaining these standards in his present retail business.

Speed Up Action on Airport P. O.

Speedy action by the federal government on the proposed postoffice for the Boston Airport, which would eventually bring ship-to-shore airmail service for this port, is seen by Mayor Curley as a result of developments today. A representative of the postoffice department called on the Mayor today on instructions from Postmaster-General Brown.

"I am inclined to believe that speedy action can be expected as a result of the alacrity with which postal authorities have responded to requests for establishment of airport mail facilities," the Mayor said following this conference.

RIVINIUS BAIL IS REDUCED

George A. Rivinius of Winchester, who confessed the theft of half a million dollars from Boston banks and from the local accounts of his Philadelphia employers, won his fight today for reduced bail.

Judge Dowd in Municipal court fixed the new figure at $25,000, half of the amount in which Rivinius is now held in default at the Charles st. jail. Atty. Francis Mullin, counsel for Rivinius, told the court his client had fully cooperated in the recoverey of more than $60,000 in cash, securities and stocks in local banks and predicted Rivinius could be of more assistance if he were at liberty on bail.

Judge Dowd made a stipulation between Mullin and other counsel in the case guaranteeing no part of the finances uncovered, or later to be uncovered, would be used in furnishing surety for Rivinius.

Atty. Mullin said friends of his client would furnish bail over the week-end.

Lynnfield Barn Damaged by Fire

MAYOR GIVES OUT REPORT DETAILING PROJECTS

Board Members Insist Diameters Are Least Possible for Traffic Relief

In reply to criticism of the huge traffic circle planned at Cambridge and Charles sts., in connection with the $1,000,000 Charles st. widening, Mayor Curley today mdae public an explanation prepared at his request by the city planning board, which he charged with responsibility for the plan.

The explanation also includes a defense of the traffic circle planned for Charles and Leverett sts., at Craigie bridge.

The proposed circle at the end of Longfellow bridge, the planning board says, has a diameter of 240 feet, considered a minimum to give adequate space for weaving owing to the volume of traffic and to the number of entering streets. The circle will include five of the piers of the Elevated structure, the location of which is another determining factor in the size of an efficient circle.

OTHER CIRCLES COMPARED

"The proposed circle at the Charles River dam has a diameter of 200 feet. With four roadways entering the circle and with the location of the piers of the Elevated structure, it is impossible to develop an efficient traffic circle with a smallr radius than that proposed.

"Cleveland Circle at Beacon st., Chestnut Hill Drive, built in 1907, has an inner radious of 90 feet and a diameter of 180 feet. It also has a roadway width of 85 feet and a 20-foot sidewalk width, whereas the circles proposed in connection with the Charles st. widening provide only a 50-foot roadway and a 10-foot sidewalk.

DETAILS OF TRAFFIC

"Columbus Park Circle has a radius of 92.5 feet, or a diameter of 185 feet, with a roadway width of 67.5 feet and a 15-foot sidewalk.

"According to a 1927 traffic count 15,200 vehicles passed over the viaduct bridge during a 10-hour period.

"Approximately 11,000 vehicles passed over Longfellow bridge, 15,000 through Cambridge st. and 9500 through Charles st. The absolute necessities of this immense volume of traffic are the only factors controlling the size of the proposed circles."

PRISON GUARDS ARE SUSPENDED

Two State Prison guards were suspended for 30 days each and their reliefs for 15 days each today by Warden James L. Hogsett as a result of the attempted escape of two prisoners in the west wing a few days ago.

The names of the guards were not announced by Warden Hogsett. He found them guilty of some negligence but not gross negligence, he said.

The suspicions followed the discovery of James P. Mahon, a prisoner, in the cell of Joseph Connelly, another prisoner, last Wednesday night, and the subsequent finding of a hole in the brick wall sufficient to let the men out to the ventilator shaft.

The suspensions followed a conference with Commissioner of Corrections A. Warren Stearns and Hogsett and a trip to Connelly's cell for an inspection.

Curley to Lay Fire Station Cornerstone

Mayor James M. Curley, accompanied by Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin, will lay the cornerstone of the $300,000 fire station in Bowdoin sq., Monday at 1 o'clock. The station will be completed in July.

Commissioner McLaughlin will preside and introduce the speakers, including Fire Chief Daniel F. Sennot, John I. Fitzgerald, city councillor of the district; George E. Robinson, the architect, and Mayor Curley.

DRY? MODIFY? REPEAL?

Boston American Prohibition Forum—$500 in Weekly Prizes

FOR REPEAL

GOOD LAUNDRY NEEDED!

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am a dry "wet" favoring the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. I do not smoke, chew, drink, or gamble. I have yet to find a better reason why the Eighteenth Amendment should not be repealed after reading the March 28 edition of the Boston American regarding the Garrett shakeup, which is only one instance what is happening all over a country that is supposed to be looked up to and respected by every human being and nation the world over.

I ask in the name of common sense anyone in favor of prohibition how much assurance have we of the future safety and respect that we all deserve with the crime, corruption, graft, murder, poison, with the jails, insane asylums, hospitals, and undertakers all being witnesses to the ever-increasing conditions the country over ever since the beginning of prohibition: Without prohibition how long do you think the bootlegger, the gangster, gunman and grafter would prosper.

The elimination of all this would take place and the country would gradually readjust itself back to normalcy again and the younger generation would be able to grow up and not have to face the reaction of such depressing and disgraceful and degrading times that now exist—times of panic, starvation and business depression, the worst the country has ever known since the Civil War.

The trouble with most people in New England is that they sit back and remark, "Oh, I suppose everything will come out all right in the wash."

Believe it or not, it is going to take some laundry or combination of laundries to wash out this problem; they will need plenty of bleach and polish in the wash tub. It is a case where the innocent sheep live and suffer with the wolf.

Lynn, Mass. R. P.

WANTS BEER AND WINE

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Prohibition has been in effect in this country for 10 years, long enough to convince most people that it is a rank failure. The reason for the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act was to stop the drinking of liquor in these United States. This it has failed to do and instead of the saloon, where good liquors could be had, we have that menace to humanity, the "speakeasy," where poisonous liquor is sold not alone to adults, but even those under age are the victims.

It has been proved in the past 10 years that a certain percentage of the people will drink spirituous liquor, regardless of whether the liquor is good or bad and even though we make laws prohibiting the drinking of liquor.

This country for the most part is made up of law-abiding citizens, so why continue on with a law that is unenforceable and tends to make the people disrespect all laws?

Therefore I am for the repeal of the prohibition law and in its stead allow the manufacture of beer and wine under government supervision. Many who drank only whiskey in the past would then turn to beer and wine after reviewing the deaths and destruction wrought by hard liquor in the past 10 years.

Greenbrier st., Dorchester. F. P.

DRINK POISON

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am in favor of repeal because it has been proved that alcoholic drinks form part of the daily diet of many people and is consumed in enormous quantities.

Before the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment the people were spending more than $1,000,000,000 a year in this country on alcoholic drinks, which at least were made on this land with the assistance of sunshine, water, air and good useful foodstuffs like grapes and barley.

Instead, the people are now imbibing the poisonous liquors which are the only kinds obtainable.

DAVID D. BLACK.

WORKS WRONG

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor throwing the Eighteenth Amendment overboard, and let each state take care by itself of the new situation.

Some of my reasons:

Unfortunately the experiment, in principle noble indeed, does work wrongly.

Neither consumption of liquor and drunkenness were diminished, nor the morals, health and bank account of the people bettered by it.

The crop of disgraceful news it provides to the papers, the statistics on alcoholism, Borah's denunciation, the reports of the enforcing commission itself, speak clearly of its failure and unenforcibleness.

Practically it has put a great prize on a crime, booming the underworld to a wealth and power never dreamed of, and spreading corruption to public officers and vital institutions.

It has fostered hypocrisy and, by the contempt of which is the object, is undermining respect for all laws.

Killed the saloon, vicious den (however, in the open and doing a legalized business), it has generated the super-vicious, covered and uncontrolled speakeasy.

It has interfered with individual rights, has created a new [illegible] for the rich and, incidentally by the zest of the forbidding thing, it has spread drinking to schools and colleges.

[illegible] need to experiment more with it? M. G.

LAUGH AT U. S.

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. It stands to reason, after 10 years trying to combat the bootlegger, and spending millions of dollars, while other countries are making millions of dollars on rich American tourists, and laughing up their sleeve, at the home of the free and the brave, that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is the only way out.

If it were repealed I dare say that crime today would drop off 75 per cent.

It would make work for thousands of jobless men today. It would do away with making hypocrites and grafters out of heretofore respectable citizens.

The scandal in our own great city is proof enough of that remark and God knows what would be uncovered if they held investigations in others of our big cities, or small ones either.

MRS. AGNES R. CONNIFF.

CURE FOR EVIL

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment because everybody in this world wants what they are not allowed to have. I tasted liquor just once and did not like the taste of it. So I do not drink but if I did like it I would do as nine-tenths of the population of our good U. S. A. is doing now, regardless of the Eighteenth Amendment. I would drink when I wanted to. I think you will find the few that do not drink today are like myself, they do not like it, and that's very few.

Why modify that law? Tell folks they cannot have the stronger stuff, and that is what they will go after. Repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and the majority of the people will be satisfied with beer and wine. They will drink less, because it will not be considered "smart."

The Eighteenth Amendment is making the people of the U. S. A. a sneaky, grafty race. The higher up men that are paid to enforce the law are encouraging the working class to break it. And what is becoming of the working class? The number of unemployed today answers that question.

MRS. RUTH MacEACHERN,
131 Bowdoin st., Dorchester.

AID TO JOBLESS

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am firmly convinced, in my mind, that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be a Godsend to the United States.

The many people that are now idle will be put to work. First we will start with the farmer. He will sell his wheat at a profit, therefore he will need men to harvest the wheat. The railroad will haul the wheat, more men and freight cars. The brewery will need men to make the beverage, they will need men to sell it.

In all the number of people that will be needed and given work will be thousands and thousands, more money will turn over, bankers will have a hand in it and make more money.

The Eighteenth Amendment has been "Weighed in the balance and found wanting."

JOHN T. HATHAWAY.
175 Potter st., New Bedford.

COSTLY LAW

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor repeal:

1. Economy—Instead of the government squandering millions yearly of the people's money on a law which in their own hearts they know cannot be enforced, after having a fair chance. If they want economy let's have it. Also adding many millions in revenue to the government under their supervision (Canadian System).

2. Labor—Give the Laboring Man, the ones that have built the country and are still building it, his glass of beer at home with his family for a small sum, instead of looking for a bootlegger to buy poison at a high price, sending him home poisoned and without money to his family. Putting many thousands to work.

3. Health, Morals—Ruining the health and morals of the people. Slowly poisoning them. Even young children are drinking today as it is easy to get. The bootlegger does not care for age, only the dollar.

4. Crime—Reducing crime, graft, deaths and murders, which have been on the increase since the law was enacted.

5. Bootlegging — Putting the bootlegger and his poison out of business. Then no one would take a chance if they could go to a government store and get good liquor and beer. In time the bootlegger would disappear.

F. J. G.
Western ave., Brighton.

ANSWERS FORD

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Forty or 50 per cent of the voters are compelled to pay the government to try and enforce a law they do not believe in or obey. Adults are only grown up children, when told not to do a thing, especially drink, they will do it for spite even if they do get sick with this bad liquor.

"The 'Drys'" pay in an equal amount and have been getting fine action for the past ten years, graft, bootlegging and even murder to try and enforce it. Good business, no stock market ever to compare with present booze market.

Ford says booze and gasoline don't mix. Present day beverages do not we agree. A few bottles of 2.75 or 4 per cent against two drinks of hootch 50 per cent or more of poison alcohol. The beer fellow would be apt to keep to the road, the hootcher would do his cross country stuff. He also states no one even with one drink should take the wheel. In that case Henry would be out of business. Good beer would cut down the number of accidents which are chiefly due to present so-called whiskey.

No matter what the drink, drink they will, and we will always get such as it is. Reviving the old wheeze, "You can lead an old soak to the bar — but you can't make him drink—water," we are not old soaks, but that goes for the present, including a big bunch of drys.

According to the L. D. poll to date, it's either nullification or modification, the latter is far better so I am for that.

J. J. FITZGERALD.

CAUSES CRIME

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

The Eighteenth Amendment is the greatest scourge of a law that was ever passed by a body of men representing the American people, and can truthfully say it has caused more crime and graft than anything yet. I have been in New York city and to Pittsburgh, Pa.; Cleveland, O.; Louisville, Ky.; Vicksburg, Miss.; St. Louis, Mo. and Bingham, Me. and have found plenty of hard liquor and home brew in all places, and have found since the Eighteenth Amendment was put in force that there is no more moral standard, as it was before. For then a man, woman, girl or boy that thought anything of themselves would not drink or go in a saloon for fear of being called a drunkard, and that meant a lot and kept young people away from it. But now girls and boys from 15 years up think it is smart to drink and now none want a person around that don't drink. I have mine whenever I can get it. J. C. W.

Bingham, Me.

FOR MODIFICATION

PROHIBITION IMPOSSIBLE!

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Prohibition is just what President Hoover termed it, "a noble experiment." That is all it ever will be.

Prohibition under existing conditions is impossible, especially in a nation where the multitudes rule and where the most ignorant man joins with the most intellectual in forming our policies.

In the beginning I leaned toward prohibition because in my community I knew of police officials who were capable of enforcing such a law. With an army of 50,000 police such as we have here, prohibition certainly would eventually become a reality. Now it seems there are not sufficient police in the entire world who are courageous enough to enforce prohibition.

Present conditions in southern Essex County are greatly improved as a result of prohibition. Highways of Colonial Salem that were unsafe for night travel have been transformed into peaceful paths under the prohibition era.

But I believe that the prohibition law is quite impossible and as it will never give a majority of the citizens satisfaction. Immediate steps should be taken to modify the law.

I am a former president of the Danvers Catholic Total Abstinence Society, an organization that believes in total abstinence for young Catholic boys, but which has never gone on record in favor of prohibition.

Every police chief in southern Essex County has gone on record as favoring even prohibition against the open saloon.

American Legion, Danvers. HENRY F. LYNCH.

HE KNOWS!

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

As a man who always liked a drink my reasons for modification of the Eighteenth Amendment are:

I have traveled for 15 years over North America with some of the largest tented amusement organizations in America and have never found a city or town where I could not get a drink. Several of us fellows would inquire where we might get a drink and just tell the attendant that we were with the circus and we were supplied and no questions asked.

I have played nearly all the large fairs in North America and noticed that at the Canadian fairs held in wet provinces, there were almost no drunks in our nightly audiences, while in the States we used to dread the nightly crowds on account of the boisterous, drunken element who could purchase their bootleg liquor right on the fair grounds.

I once stopped at a Detroit hotel and saw school children on their way to school from lunch, staggering on the sidewalk.

G. A. H.
Adams ave., Everett.

HE'S FOR BEER

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am in favor of modification. This great and honorable nation of sweet land of liberty should prove to itself it is sensible enough to manage itself wisely, that is—safe and sound; the way that would benefit and satisfy majority, if not all, on question of prohibition.

My idea is that prohibition should be slightly modified. Spirits are out of question; also light wine should not be permitted because it would be drunk in large doses.

To bring about a compromise I believe that beer with moderate percentage of alcohol, if it would not solve the problem, would improve the situation. If sold by government at moderate price, it would be a national healthful drink.

JOSEPH ROUBA.
116 Columbia st., Bangor, Me.

CAN'T DO WORSE!

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am in favor of modification.

When a human being poisons himself it may be his business. When in poisoning himself he becomes an abnormal member of a normal society it is the state's business. Hence prohibition. We needed it—we got it.

But when, under that prohibition, that human being, to get the poison, erects an illegitimate, degenerating, undermining institution—racketeering—which costs every man, woman and child, law-abiding or not, cash money, if nothing else, then that prohibition needs mending.

STUDENT'S VIEW

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

After the Eighteenth Amendment had been ratified and proclaimed as part of "the supreme law of the land," I was home from the army and curious, yet optimistic, about the enforcement of such a law. One thought one foresaw not merely the elimination of the unsavory saloon, but what is more important, a temperate nation. Public opinion ultimately rules the world. A reasonable period of trial and error has now elapsed. Is the experiment noble, or is it ignoble and demeaning to the people of the United States?

Legal scholars now view law functionally. They ask: Is the law getting satisfactory results? The crime wave—that America has now endured long enough, is directly traceable to prohibition. The demand for liquor, and the consequent profits, cause small wage-earners and unemployed persons to succumb to the temptation. And they are able to justify their stand by stating that there is nothing essentially bad in such a calling. The step to adulterated stuff follows.

Is not the toll too great? Is it not more manful to modify the law along the lines of the Canadian system than further to continue to destroy our civic probity and tarnish our own souls? The 1928 election in Massachusetts and the present Literary Digest poll show the trend.

Even before this the Hearst papers showed the folly of prohibition and now the country realizes the accuracy of their predictions. LEWIS C. CASSIDY.

Graduate law student, Harvard Law School.

SEES THE FOLLY

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Booze is a curse, every drunkard who has brought disgrace upon himself knows that. He foresees hidden pitfalls, takes the pledge to avoid them, but is tempted to break it. If some magic power could wave a wand and banish booze from the earth forever, half the troubles of the world would disappear.

But with prohibition the drunkard is like a slave chained to his oar in a galley; he knows how conditions are beneath the deck, it's his sweat and blood that carries along the splendor that is seen only on the surface.

The king who commanded the tide to obey was not near as foolish as some people who think that prohibition can ever be successfully enforced.

I'm fo modification that the parasite who tempts the drunkard with poisonous booze and brings innocent victims into his fold may be banished.

That pure wines and beer may be had. That the concrete foundation upon which our government is founded will not be seeped with poisonous booze and impure home made brews until it eventually gives way, and brings upon us a condition worse than ever existed before prohibition. L. FITZSIMMONS.
116 Mt. Pleasant ave., Roxbury.

TIME NOT RIPE

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

The time is not ripe for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment as it would cause too much disturbance in the country in view of the fact there are too many people with such set opinions for and against that no line of argument will change them. Take a family, for instance, the wife is set on the Eighteenth Amendment. Husband set for repeal. The children takes it all in these differences creates unhappiness in the family, disruption eventually it's a battle royal who is going to win out.

There must be some happy medium brought to bear so that neither side would find that they are not beaten. Let the Eighteenth Amendment remain in the constitution. It will please one side. Modification is a concession for the other side and a menace that threatened is apt to die out.

Modification will revive temperance, confidence that government only erred, restored bone and sinew of country, made happier those that fight in peace or war for the rights granted in the Constitution, liberty. They don't forget the happy social times had in organizations and clubs, dry and wet, in harmony, no drunkenness, respect for law its motto.

WOMAN'S VIEW

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I can say without fear of intelligent contradiction that the prohibition law has not operated satisfactorily, nor has it at anytime produced anything like the results expected of it. It does not by any means fulfil the hopes or purposes of its originators or the wishes of the prohibition element.

It has simply taken the sale of liquor out of the hands of responsible persons and passed it into the hands of a tremendously lawless and even violent element.

The quantity of liquor and the amount of its consumption has unquestionably increased since National prohibition, and the quality of liquor consumed has materially declined.

Many who previous to the enactment of National prohibition were advocates of the movement have long since changed their position in the realization thereto that the only sound course of promoting temperance is along educational and not legal enforcement lines.

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Prohibition should be taught in our public schools and colleges. Our laws, I feel, should be lived up to. To stop this liquor when a man is arrested for being drunk, before he leaves the police station he should tell where he bought the liquor, and if he wont tell why jail him. When he tells and liquor is found this party knows that it is against the law. Now in stead of probation give him a $5000, fine or 10 years in jail. And I feel if the fines were $100, for getting drunk, this would have a tendency to stop this liquor racket.

Crime starts by some of our cheap moving pictures shows. I believe that government stores should handle all liquor. I believe canned malt and certain grape juices, should be handled at these stores, and these government stores should be handled by good honest trustworthy men. And in conclusion let us stand for a more solid law. If bootleggers got life imprisonment maybe that would help. But probation will never help. B. B. A.

FOR PROHIBITION

A 'NATION REDEEMED'

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Once upon a time a great nation was sorely tried by the evils attendant to the traffic in intoxicating drinks.

Towns and villages first tried to control this traffic, which often caused dire consequences to large numbers of the inhabitants. By religious and secular teachings, they tried to foster temperance and sobriety. They legislated and punished offenders. Later, sovereign states attempted, in different ways, to curb the menace of the rampant liquor trade. In all these attempts to control the sale of drink for the benefit of the people they were only partially successful.

At last, the people of this nation decided that only by national prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks could the traffic be effectively controlled. The Eighteenth Amendment came to pass.

America has led in a great social experiment. It was a daring move. It has intimately affected the social habits of great numbers of our people. Enormous have been the material benefits; spiritually, millions of us feel that we are no less free. Modern ways of living demand social control over the individual; modern education and research will continue to demonstrate the need of this beneficent law.

WENDELL F. FARRINGTON.

Chelsea House, Chelsea.

WHY HE'S FOR PROHIBITION

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor the Eighteenth Amendment and enforcement: First because liquor strikes at the three things that are dear to the heart of every worthy citizen—God and home and native land.

Second, because liquor not only strikes at the present generation, but projects its curse on unborn generations to come.

Third, because liquor is the inevitable foe of the best, industrial, commercial and spiritual interests of our nation.

Fourth, because God says, and the Bible and history proves, that, "Where there is no vision, the people perish: but he that keepeth the law, happy is he." Proverbs 29:18. And no nation can maintain a vision and be a victim of the "blind staggers" at the same time.

Fifth, because America is my friend. And I will not favor anything which I know will endanger the welfare of my friend.

Sixth, because liquor will take a noble and capable man, and make him an abject curse, instead of a community blessing.

MOTHER'S LESSON

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor prohibition because my mother taugh me, in my childhood days that liquor would hinder me and not help me. I believe I have got on better in the world sober, than if I had been a drinker or a drunkard. As a man I can look back and only say my mother was right.

What can a man see in drinking booze? Does he get any satisfaction? I can't see where he does. He might say, "you drys are taking my liberty away from me." What about my liberty? I have my rights, and I believe I have a right to use the highways and byways in peace and safety.

We have more and better schools, better dressed children, better homes, better living conditions, more deposited in our banks, better credit to every man and woman.

Prohibition has put food, shoe and many other kinds of stores in where the saloon once was. The money fathers and mothers spent in the saloon is now mostly spent on their children, which means a better America in the future, and I do believe prohibition is just in its teens waiting to prove itself.

POOR MARTYRS!

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I firmly believe in prohibition and see the good it has done our country—as well as the bad, but was there not always an evil along with the good?

Have not crime and graft always been present, more or less? Is any law that is a law strictly adhered to?

Has not a murderer always been punished for his deed—and yet do we not read of murders daily? People will always murder, I suppose, but just because these sordid things happen, should we say, "Let them, for you see it cannot be overcome."

Should we, because of the many things we see before us, let wrongdoing just go by, sit back and tell ourselves that it cannot be helped?

Burlington, Mass.

GOOD RESULTS

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Why I am in favor of prohibition:

For the incalculable benefit it has been to wives, mothers and children, who have suffered in times past indescribable misery and privation through the drinking propensity of husbands and fathers.

It has raised the standard of living among those of small earning capacity and reduced poverty to a minimum. Orphanages have ceased to exist as such in nearly all cities, and charitable aid is seldom sought through habits of debauchery by inebriated parents.

There are multitudes of rum addicts who now scorn the thought of once having been slaves to its demoralizing effects and are now strong advocates of prohibition. The Book of Books teaches that he who hesitates or temporizes with wrong-doing is lost.

In this connection, there must not be any let up in our enforcement program, we must forge ahead with a new determination to make America safe for posterity and prove to other nations, which are closely watching us, looking for help and inspiration, to fight this great curse, that America stands with her back against the wall never to surrender to the forces of rum and rebellion. J. M. LATHROP.

SAYS IT'S BETTER

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Why I think prohibition has been a success. The country has developed with new standards of living and become prosperous. The wage earners are spending less for drink than before and are putting this money into goods and savings by so doing. The country as well as the wage earner is better off.

They own more automobiles, have more cash in their pockets, buy better clothing and the thousands of dollars a week that went into saloons is now taken home.

Something to Think About

Editor Boston American:

The Roxbury Memorial High School Alumni Association is grateful to you for co-operation in our search for lost graduates in connection with the annual reunion held February 26.

With the official restoration of the name "Roxbury" to the new Roxbury Memorial High School for Girls, we hope to revive the interest of the men and women who attended the old Roxbury high school, founded in 1852.

Roxbury high school graduates are urged to send to the Roxbury Memorial High School Alumni Association at the Roxbury Memorial High School for Girls, Townsend and Deckard sts., Roxbury, Mass., their names, class year and present addresses, with maiden names in the case of married women, in order that the success of this year's reunion may be doubled in 1931.

Says Discovery By "Wets" Rather Tardy

Editor Boston American:

May I ask this question through your letter column?

The Wets [illegible] want the saloon back. They are agreed it was a bad institution. [illegible] well [illegible]. Wets [illegible] anything to get rid of the saloon when it was here? Have they just discovered what a bad thing the saloon is once it was gone? It is rather strange that the Wets should begin to hate a thing after it is gone. Do they know that [illegible] the saloon?

"Just a Tempest In the Teapot"

Editor Boston American:

Boston Unitarians are raising a tempest in a theological teapot. It's all over Humanism. Humanism is a by-product of Positivism, the creation of Auguste Comte, championed in England in the 19th century by a Mr. Harrison. It is not very far away from theism, although a Boston paper flunked on this, which is perfectly natural, because newspapers are not theologically inclined.

The Rev. John H. Dietrich of Minneapolis deserves the credit for giving considerable impetus to this teaching. The Rev. Charles F. Potter of New York city has adopted it in his preaching.

The Rev. Albert C. Dieffenbach of Boston, editor of the Christian Register, is at present a target because he has given too much prominence to this species of Unitarian teaching and it has upset the old guard of liberalism. Never mind, there has been many a flurry in Unitarian [illegible] 100 years ago. [illegible] theological teapot [illegible]. Nothing [illegible] Boston [illegible] has always been the center of theological [illegible]. They are invariably interesting.

Says Hope of Nation With Women's Clubs

Editor Boston American:

A woman of some social prominence asked a short time ago: "What's the use of women's clubs?"

As there are 11,000 clubs [illegible] in America [illegible] over three million of women are backing such organizations. For the work that they have already accomplished it is claimed by educational leaders that this country needs more than ever more women's clubs, because in organized womanhood lies the moral and intellectual hope of this republic.

To indicate the growing influence of women, let me just cite this case. Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who has been selected by eleven national women's organizations to go to Hollywood to study motion pictures in regard to their higher usefulness, has come to this conclusion after her survey that she does not feel that the movie problem is a matter of immorality. It is rather a matter of banality that is commonplace, trivial. This is the chief peril of the movies. Some opinion is this. Women are bound to be heard.

Lauds Endowment of American History Chair

Editor Boston American:

Englishmen are on the road to understand American history and especially that bearing upon the events leading up to the independence of America.

At University College, London, there has recently been endowed a chair of American history and for the provision and maintenance of a library of American history. I believe this has come about through the munificence of Edward S. Harkness of New York. This may mean nothing to the average American, but it does mean much to those who have for some time been trying to get Englishmen better acquainted with what has happened during the tercentenary which is being celebrated this year.

Pays Tribute to Warner and Hall

Editor Boston American:

I wish to congratulate Atty.-Gen. Warner and Damon Hall on the manner which they have been carrying on the "Garrett investigation."

If no such action had been taken Boston would be in the same class as Chicago and other large cities. Boston was being overrun with bootleggers, grafters and pickpockets.

This inquiry will no doubt be of a great aid to our younger generation. It will teach them to watch the manner in which the public affairs are being run and prevent any such catastrophe occurring in the future in police circles.

No Sanction for Generous Use of Wine

Editor Boston American:

In regard to David Goldstein's article written in disparagement of prohibition and prohibitionists, may I suggest that the statements contained therein, to the effect, "that the merriment of the wedding guests at Cana was prolonged by the generous supply of wine made by Christ and also that Christ Himself drank without any regard whatsoever for the contemptible names the Pharisees hissed at Him, cannot be interpreted as being a sanction for a generous use of wines by the people in this present age.

Christ lived on earth about 33 years and led a most holy life in poverty and suffering, in order to show us the way to salvation, by his teachings and examples.

The fact that he lived in poverty and suffering during this period of his ministry on earth has not been interpreted by many of his disciples of today that they do likewise. If the representatives and ministers of Christ do not find it necessary to follow His example in this very significant event, then it is no less proper that the members of church congregations and the people as a whole should exercise their judgment and belief and enact legislation which is beneficial to themselves, such as the Prohibition Amendment, even though by so doing they act in contravention to " illustration of the wedding guests at Cana as pictured by Mr. Goldstein.

NEW COOLING SYSTEM FOR HUB PLANE

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The first commercial airplane to have a motor cooled by Prestone instead of water, is being completed at the Boston Municipal Airport, it was announced by Harry Copeland, manager of the local station of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service.

Prestone cooling system has been developed by Army Air Corps engineers and has been tried on several types of airplanes. The cooling fluid allows for smaller radiators, thus reducing head resistance.

Copeland stated that a Robin monoplane needed a new motor and not wishing to reinstall the OX-5 power plant, he decided to equip the ship with an OXX-6 motor of 100 horsepower. The radiator was cut down to conform with the requirements of Prestone which [illegible] less fluid to keep the motor temperature normal.

Engineers of M. I. T. have inspected the installation and [illegible] stated that there is no reason why the experiment should not be a success.

Copeland and his chief of maintenance Paul Battalana drew up the plans and turned them over to the service department, where Doug Husted and Robert Whittemore made the necessary changes in the engine bed to take the higher powered motor.

It is expected that the ship will be test-hopped the first of the week.

"We are not claiming anything for the job until we see it fly," said Copland today. "If it works the water-cooled OX-5 will take another step toward permanent retirement."

Found Dying

Believed to have slipped while trying to board a moving train, Albert M. Perkins, 50, of Bucksport, Me., was found dying beside the railroad tracks 50 feet from the Hingham station. He died a few minutes later.

The Weather

The retreat will be brought to a close Sunday morning with a communion breakfast. The principal speaker at the breakfast will be the Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., of [illegible] College.

Charitable Report Shows Busy Year

The 28th annual report of the Catholic Charitable Bureau, with headquarters at 43 Tremont st., has been submitted to Cardinal O'Connell by the head of the bureau. Special mention is made of the new settlement house on Tileston st. in the North End, which was erected at a cost of [illegible]. Of this house the report says:

"Our generous benefactor who has given us this building [illegible] opportunities of doing [illegible] good for the youth of the North End."

The figures show that in 1929 [illegible] people came to the bureau offices whose wants were made a matter of record. Our telephone calls number [illegible], incoming letters 6,62[illegible].

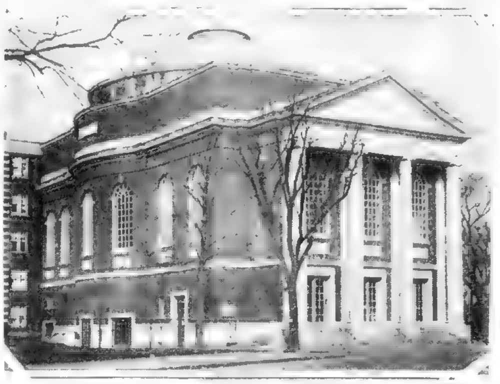
Kitchen Maid's Poem to Be Sung

A [illegible] poem of John D. Rockefeller was written by an unknown kitchen maid. It has been set to music by the Rev. Arthur T. Brooks and will be sung at a song service to be held at the Dudley Street Baptist Church tomorrow evening "home talent" service. Members of the congregation will sing, and there will be opportunity for original work.

New Minister in Somerville

The Rev. Charles P. F. Hall, pastor of the Universalist Church, Valley Falls, R. I., will take up his pastorate at the West Somerville church tomorrow. He was once a Sunday school teacher in this church while a student in Tufts College. This is his eighth parish.

To Be Opened Next Sunday, April 13



The beautiful new "First Church of Christ," Cambridge, Waterhouse st. and Massachusetts ave., has been completed, and on Palm Sunday will throw its doors wide open to its congregation. Capacity of the auditorium is 700. The building is patterned after the library of the University of Virginia with a dome flattened something like the Pantheon in Rome. Interior of the dome is of dull blue, giving a sky effect. Decorations are, many of them, of gray-blue with pews of light tan. Mr. Torrence Parker is first reader and Miss Mabel Lucas, second reader. The Scientists have been holding their services in the lower Sunday School rooms since 1924, and the society was organized in Cambridge in 1899. The present construction was begun last June.

Satan Is a Real Being, Says Shultz

"When Satan Joins the Chain Gang" will be the subject of Rev. James Earl Shultz at the Adventist Temple tomorrow evening. Being fundamentalist, Mr. Shultz insists that the devil is a literal being, that he was once a mighty angel created by God, but through ambition fell from his high state; that he was reserved for judgment, but through the seduction of the first pair in Eden gained this world [illegible] penitent of this earth will finally be annihilated upon this earth by the fires which purify it for the righteous, to whom a "new earth" is promised.

"IS RELIGION PERSONAL?"

The Rev. Henry Pitt Van Dusen, D.D., of Union Seminary, New York city, will speak on the subject, "Is Religion Personal?" at the Old South church tomorrow evening, before a group of students drawn from many faiths and groups about Boston. This is the third and last of a series of three such student meetings this winter. Students participating in the conduct of the service are Miss Louise Drew, Miss Margaret Lewis and Mr. William McNevin.

Whose Pastor?

Governor Allen to Preside at Garden

The Prohibition Loyalty League arranging for the mass meeting at Boston Garden on Sunday, May 25, promises to fill and overflow the building, according to Dr. A. Z. Conrad and others who have it in hand.

Governor Allen will preside, and May 25 has been set as the date for the meeting.

Sixty Voices Sing at the First Church

Corcoran to Aid McEwan at H. C.

Worcester, April 5 — Arthur [illegible] Corcoran, who has been [illegible] of the Holy Cross College football team for [illegible] years, has been appointed end coach as assistant to Head Coach John J. McEwan. His appointment completes the staff of Capt. McEwan so that Luke Kelley, who has been a member of the coaching staff 15 years, will be free to accept an appointment elsewhere.

Three Hub Boxers Lose at Worcester

Worcester, April 5—Vernon Cormier, Worcester, gave Jimmy Picardi, Boston, a sound thrashing in the main bout here, taking all except the first and third rounds. In the semifinal, Lou Brouillard, Worcester, stopped Owen Travers, Worcester, in the sixth. Ero Peterson, Spencer, defeated Gus Russo, Boston, and Tony Capiro, Providence, won on a foul in the fourth round from Reggie Monte of Boston in the preliminaries.

Fitchburg Grid List

Fitchburg, April 5—The complete football schedule of Fitchburg High school, announced today by Coach Clarence N. Amott, calls for 11 games. The schedule follows:

Sept. 20, Worcester South High; 27, Worcester North High; Oct. 4, Providence Tech; 11, St. John's High of Worcester; 18, Waltham High at Waltham; 25, Framingham at Framingham; Nov. 1, Gardner High; 8, Brockton High; 15, Bristol High; 22, Athol High; 27, Leominster High.

120 BATTLES ON AMATEUR RING CARD

HOMER BLENUS, 210-pound Dorchester milkman, who stands three inches over six feet and is rated as one of the most crushing punchers who has invaded local amateur boxing ranks in many years, will carry the hopes of the Hub into the national championships which will be staged at the Boston Arena next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. There will be 120 bouts in all.

Blenus, who was selected as the Boston heavyweight representative, rounds out what is regarded as the strongest local team ever selected for the titular tournament.

Until a few weeks ago, Blenus was unknown. He always aspired to fame in the ring but not until the recent diamond ring tournament did he make his first appearance. He proved an immediate sensation. In the trial bouts of the [illegible] the [illegible] scored [illegible] knockouts. A week later in the same tournament, he knocked out two other opponents.

Blenus, who has a greater following now than most local professional ring gladiators, has refused to turn pro, preferring to first make a bid for the national crown. The new heavyweight star has not confined his efforts to boxing alone, for he held the Regimental 50-yard dash record when a schoolboy at Jamaica Plain high and he was an all-interscholastic football star.

As every competitor already has proved his superiority in his class in his respective district, it is expected that the show will be the best ever staged here.

The schedule calls for the bouts to start at 7:30 Monday and Tuesday. The National Association, by reducing the number of entries from each district from 10 to 8, has confined the boxers to those of championship caliber.

For the first time in history Washington will be represented by a team of five boxers in the tournament. Eight entries have been received from Buffalo and the boys are headed for the Hub today from all sections of the country.

Mass. Women Golfers Face Busy Season

The Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts has completed the most ambitious program of competition for the 1930 season that the organization ever has arranged. In addition to the regular schedule of district team matches for which the members of 67 clubs are eligible, the list includes eight other tournaments or matches.

The district team matches start April 14 and extend until May 15, with home and home engagements for each team. As has been announced, the individual championship tournament will be staged the week of May 19, at Salem, while the new junior championship goes to Oakley, starting June 30.

Open tournaments will be held May 2, at Charles river, and May 13, at Oakley, while an interstate team match with the champion of the Providence league will be conducted May 28, at Woodland, in conjunction with the association's semiannual meeting.

The Eastern championship and the intercity team matches for the Griscom cup will be at The Country Club during the week of June 5.

College Announces Baseball Schedule

The University of North Carolina baseball team, champions of the Tri-State League of the Southern Conference last year, face a tough schedule of 28 games for the coming season, beginning with a game with Springfield here March 27.

Twenty of the games will be with Southern Conference opponents. Springfield and Cornell will be the only intersectional foes. The usual brace of games will be played with N. S. State, Duke and Wake Forest in the Big Five, as also the usual three-game series with Virginia, culminating in the annual Greensboro game.

Mahoney Back in Hub to Play Ball

Neil Mahoney, former Newton high, Northeastern and South Boston "Twi" catcher, has just returned to Boston with aspirations to play summer baseball again. During the past year, he has been in Florida in the grapefruit business. Mahoney, who played every game for four years at Northeastern and was captain last year, will be on hand for the Huskies' opener today against Navy Red Sox.

NEARY DOING GREAT JOB AS TRAINER

By BILL CONNELL

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 5—The homeward bound Braves [illegible] here today in the Northern march to clash with the Chattanooga ball club. Six more barnstorming trip tilts remain on the slate of the Tribe before it reaches Boston for the two-game series with the Red Sox.

One of the most encouraging things about this season's Braves is the way the players have been brought along without any serious injuries. A great amount of credit for the condition of the athletes is due Trainer Jimmy Neary.

Bill Connell

Over 20 years ago, in 1909, Jim Neary came to the Braves. He has been with them since then and most of the time in the capacity of trainer. Last spring the authorities at the Tepee decided to try a novel method of caring for the boys and a doctor was hired to act as trainer.

Dozens of daily dozens, baking in complicated machinery and radical forms of exercising were used to con[illegible] the men last season [illegible] Neary was given a position in the [illegible] at the Wigwam.

In spite of all the special treatment the Braves did not do well at all and this year, it was decided to give Neary another fling at the job. And how well Neary has done his work is shown by the present condition of the members of the squad.

Neary Has Squad in Perfect Condition

So barring accident between now and the start of the season the Braves will field a bunch of perfectly conditioned warriors when they face the Giants, one week from Tuesday, in New York.

Brown Looks Good Against Brooklyn

Bob Brown looked good in the one inning he tossed against the Robins. The first batter lobbed a fly to Bill Dunlap in right field. The second man up tossed a fast ball and Brown fielded the grounder and calmly threw him out at first. The next man rolled one to Bernie James at short and was tossed out.

"Ken" Smith caught Bob Smith. It sounded like a family battery. The new catcher of the Tribe did well in his stay behind the bat.

That final putout of the first half of the ninth was a great play. The ball went to James at short, Bernie slipped on the throw and the ball went wide. Neun made another of his great one-hand stops, though, and the runner was out.

Against Dazzy Vance, right-handed pitcher, Joe Bratcher and Jimmy Welsh, lefty batters, played right and center fields for the Braves. Bill Dunlap went to right and Earl Clark to center when a southpaw started tossing for Brooklyn. This policy of shifting players according to the pitching probably will be in vogue with the Braves all season.

Helene Madison Breaks 2 Records

Seattle, Wash., April 4 (AP)—Two world's records in one race were established here tonight by Miss Helene Madison, 16-year-old Seattle swimmer. She shattered the 200 and 300-yard marks.

In her endeavor to break the world's 300-yard mark in her showing in Seattle since her record-breaking performances in Florida last month, Helene clipped 171-5 seconds off the official time established by Gertrude Ederle, of New York, in 1922, and nearly three seconds off the latest record set by Josephine McKim of Los Angeles.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

Two points in the golf swing are fraught with trouble, and at one or another or both, these places the player with a very good swing action can now and then find himself going wrong. These are what might be called the extremes of the swing action as a whole, one being the point where you turn from back swing to forward, where the most velvety action is called for; the other the point of contact with the ball — and here the most velvety action still is called for. At the hitting instant the swing action is more of an exertion, but it cannot go beyond the point of physical smoothness of action. Now if you find yourself trying to add a hit with your shoulders you may be certain you are overstepping the lines of smoothness and rhythm, because you cannot hit with your shoulders. You hit with the club, not with any part of your body. If you find yourself inclined to "throw the right shoulder in," decide to forego anything you may think you can get from that action, and just let the club swing in of itself, ahead of your shoulders. Your shoulders must follow the action—the clubhead leads all the way. That means it is slightly in front of everything else, or slightly ahead of you, all the way forward.

Dempsey Planning Eliminaton Contest

Chicago, April 5 (AP)—Jack Dempsey is planning a featherweight elimination contest starting with the Bud Taylor-Fidel La Barba bout April 21 at the Coliseum and winding up with a championship fight between Bat Battalino, the titleholder, and the survivor of the tournament.

Dempsey is negotiating for a match between the winner of the La Barba-Taylor bout and Earl Mastro, the victor to engage Kid Chocolate for the right to meet Battalino in an outdoor fight for the championship.

Eagles' Catcher Shows Gameness

MILADY FINDS NEW WAY OF WAVING HAIR

Just What Beauty Has Been Awaiting a Long Time

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON
World Famous Beautician

Josephine Huddleston

A NEW method of winding the hair for a permanent wave has made its bow in beauty circles And it has proven quite successful. Whereas last year we had only five types of permanent wave this new winding gives us six, and so we may expect to see bigger and better permanents this season.

Before telling you about the new winding, let me review for you the old ones so that you can make the necessary comparisons yourself thus determining just which one you want to try

So much depends upon how you intend to care for your hair after the permanent has been given. If you plan on dropping into the beauty shop each week or ten days to have a finger wave set you probably will prefer the "flat" or the "tight" winding.

Both of these windings require that the hair be set in the beauty shop, if the full beauty of the permanent is to be gained. For the "flat" winding the curling rods are placed near the scalp and the hair is wound flat around the curlers to the ends. When set this wave gives the appearance of a marcel.

For the "tight" winding a half twist is given and instead of being wound flat onto the curlers the hair is loosely twisted and then wound around the spindles to about two inches from the ends. The ends of the hair are finished off with the "flat" winding

These two waves last much longer than any of the other types and so are less expensive, unless one considers the cost of having a finger wave every few weeks But in this case it isn't the cost that counts, it's the upkeep! For unless you intend to have either of these waves set by finger waving, done by an expert, you will not gain the attractive effects every woman is looking for

Those of you who look upon the permanent as a means of avoiding the beauty shop, especially during the hottest weather, will do far better to have either the "medium," the "natural" or the "folded" type of permanent

The reverse winding is used for the "medium" and the "natural" waves, the hair being wound onto the curlers in much the same manner as that employed for doing the hair up on kid curlers

The new "folded" winding is done by folding the hair around the curlers and gives a perfectly grand wave! When properly done the hair comes out in the most natural appearing wave yet achieved and one that is generally becoming because so many different effects can be had when this type of permanent is given

The hair can be pushed up into a deep, loose wave, as is possible with the "medium" and the "natural," but in addition to this the "folded" winding gives a deeper impression than the others. It really looks like a very soft, deep marcel.

The "full twist," which makes the sixth winding on our list, is used only in rare cases where the structure of the hair is so fine you simply can't do a thing with it

Under such circumstances the "full twist" is an angel in disguise, for it gives body to the fine hair, making it possible to arrange it not only easily but becomingly.

3-Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

THIS is the time of year when many of your [illegible] not [illegible] are [illegible] the [illegible] sunshine of Cuba. As a winter resort, this island [illegible] so accessible [illegible] is running a close [illegible] famed [illegible] Florida and [illegible] California.

Havana is the main [illegible] for visitors to Cuba and [illegible] [illegible] The entrance to Havana's marvelous harbor [illegible] scarcely more than a [illegible] across, past the grim Morro Castle. Once through [illegible] however, the harbor opens [illegible] body of water some three [illegible] long and upwards of a [illegible] and half wide. Along the shore are boulevards and promenades with here and there a park. Public buildings some old and some new, and beautiful private residences [illegible] part of the city

Skyscrapers? Well Havana has a few but [illegible] With the true temperament of [illegible] Latin, the city fathers have decided that beauty is more valuable than thousands of square feet of [illegible] space on an acre of ground [illegible] ordinances limiting the [illegible] of "big business" have been passed The newer buildings are being constructed along [illegible] Cuban lines and an attempt is being made to maintain the atmosphere of the old city

One of the finest of the more modern buildings is the new presidential palace This huge ornate building, facing on the famous Plaza de Armas was completed in 1920. Its lines are classic, from the impressive colonnade at the street level up to the nicely formed dome

In the older sections of the city will be found shops and [illegible] built in the early colonial style. Some of these old shopping centers with their arcades and awnings and windows filled with the bright miscellany of the island remind one of Oriental bazaars

One runs across all sorts of interesting sights on the streets of Cuba's capital The natives from the rural districts, the negroes and negresses, the itinerant merchants [illegible]. It is surprising what a variety of things are sold by these street merchants. First you will see a strong country man with a huge basket of bananas, then a young colored boy carrying a few caged songbirds. Songbirds incidentally, are popular and there are few shops or houses which do not have one. Laces and linens, hats everything is to be had from these street merchants

Havana's appeal as a winter playground is growing year by year It is a fascinating spot—one which is seldom left with other than a feeling of satisfaction. Go there when you can. It isn't far, but it is another country and a charming one.

Fads and Fashions

Roll Your Own Umbrella and place it in your golf bag with your clubs. Of course you can only do this with a specially designed umbrella which despite its midget size has a generous spread. The umbrellas are striped and should match your jacket, your scarf or sweater

A Tail of Detail is told by the new suits, all of which are distinguished by important dressmaker touches. A suit of navy blue [illegible] has a skirt with a low-placed flare that almost gives a hobble skirt appearance. The attached belt is pink satin as is the blouse which has self-appliqued bands outlined with feather stitching

Pick Your Type in print frocks this year. It is predicted that tiny inconspicuous patterns will be smart for day wear with the more bold prints reserved for the evening mode. Very new is printed bariste, which makes up a delightful frock with shirring at the normal waistline and short cape sleeves.

Champagne Sparkles in the color scheme of the mode It is the hue used for an alluring evening ensemble of georgette. Both cape and gown are made on long flowing lines with a pronounced dip to the back. The folds of the cape are edged with a border of kolinsky.

Three Is Company when it means three different fabrics and colors on a beach ensemble. A white pique suit has appliques of blue linen and an orange shantung coat, edged with the white pique. The beret, parasol and shoes are also of the various fabrics and tones.

A Timely Fashion is that of having a tiny watch set into a diamond clasp that clips onto the edge of your cuff in a delightfully new way. The patent clasp is absolutely safe, and these watch clasps are being offered in baguette diamond clasps with emeralds or onyx. Other watches are hidden behind little basket shaped gemmed brooches.

Tweeds Shrink back to give the spotlight to woolens of light weave for spring. The newest novelty is a pin-dotted woolen that is especially good for suits. A suit of red wool has white dots knitted into its surface. The jacket has a wide opening to show the white line blouse trimmed with rickrack braid.

Address Thanks to Lady

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1—To whom should the letter of thanks be sent for a wedding gift when it is received from a married couple? Should the envelope be addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. ——" should the salutation be the same?

2—Would it be correct to use stationery initialed with the maiden name after marrying?

3 I shall continue my work after marriage. Would it be proper to use my maiden name if more convenient for business purposes?

Newton MARION

1—Such a letter of thanks should be addressed to "Mrs. ——" but the note within should include not only thanks to the wife but should, of course, use the plural "you" and speak throughout the letter of appreciation to both the wife and the husband.

2—No, not for social letters. For business letters, except under conditions that you mention in your next question.

3 Yes. This is often done

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

1—Will you please tell me whether it is correct to leave cards at a formal tea?

2—My husband and I were invited to one given on a Sunday afternoon by the Mr. and Mrs. of the household. Would the usual form of leaving one of my cards and two of his cards still be correct?

3—I also want to know if a note is sent afterwards? M. R. B.

EASTER TRADE EXPECTED TO BE LARGE

By FRANK H. MELOON

Confidence in Easter trade for 1930 is the keynote of optimistic opinion among New England leaders in fields of business and finance. Last year Easter came in March, and this year it falls in April. The last 10 days are specifically cited by President Hubert T. Parson of Woolworth as having witnessed a notable improvement in general buying by the public. In the past sales at the "fivvy" have furnished a remarkably good clue to what was going on in other sections of the merchandising world.

When Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, was in Boston last week, he told me he was confident that new building and construction would "come through" with the necessary upswings to insure a fair amount of prosperity for the nation as a whole.

With a total value of $291,833,000 for March, heavy construction and engineering contracts let throughout the country registered the highest monthly total on record, Engineering News-Record reports. This figure compares with $195,388,000 in February and $360,326,000 in March, 1929. As compared with the same month last year, the largest gain was in public work awards, with a 63.5 per cent rise, but private contracts showed a 4.5 per cent decline.

Oscar C. Huffman, recently elected president of Continental Can Co., Inc., is by no means new as an executive in his field. Mr. Huffman was president of United States Can Co. when it was merged with Continental, at which time it was the world's third largest manufacturer of cans. Mr. Huffman's first employment was unique for a business executive: it was that of private secretary to Henry St. George Tucker, member of Congress from Virginia.

Gurnett & Co. Say: "Business conditions generally appear to be making satisfactory progress, and continued improvement is expected. Increased confidence has been generated by rising security prices. While the rapid advance in some stocks has been out of line with prospects, we believe there are opportunities still available to purchase attractive issues at reasonable levels. Although the opinion prevails that a technical reaction is due, the reduced volume on recessions indicates that any decline will be minor in character."

John J. Cornell, general counsel of the Baltimore & Ohio, makes a statement at once timely and very important. He says: "The greatest burden upon the backs of the American people today is the cost of crime. The annual bill is a dozen billion dollars—bigger than the cost of the armament of all the nations of the world. Its reduction and the lessening of crime itself is more important than all the international peace treaties that can be negotiated."

The first quarter of 1930 promises to be distinguished by the straightening out of the long-felt difficulties of the oil industry. Over-production appears to have been made a thing of the past with intelligent co-operation prevailing. Advances in prices to the consumer are looked for next, with the big selling season opening.

Quincy Mining, which has been setting new highs during the past week or so, is expected Monday to enjoy the distinction of being the first big copper stock to be approved as a purchase "over the air" by an outstanding Boston advisory organization.

President Ignatz Wil, of Traveler Shoe Stores Corporation, announces that, subject to approval of stockholders, Traveler Shoe Stores Corporation has entered into an agreement with Melville Shoe Corporation to transfer its business to Melville for a certain number of shares of Melville common stock, exact number to depend upon the valuation and net assets of Traveler made as of the opening of business April 1, 1930. The transaction when consummated will bring the total number of stores under Melville direction to 505 with a sales volume of more than $30,000,000. The Traveler chain was established over 37 years ago, having grown from a single store opened in Boston in the fall of 1893 to 44 stores at present.

Although Shawmut Bank Investment Trust's report of earnings for third fiscal year of operation ended Feb. 28, was not quite up to the previous year, which showed a sharp gain over initial annual period, it indicates stability, considering the situation in latter part of 1929. Net earnings of $861,993 equal to $11.49 a share on 75,000 shares outstanding, compare with $887,611, or $11.84 a share last year, and $127,532, or $1.70 a share, from March, 1927, to February 28, 1928. Only 40,105 of the 75,000 shares have been actually issued.

Common stocks of companies furnishing equipment and suppplies for building and construction work have shown moderate recovery since the low point reached last December. Standard Statistics' index for this group of stocks reached a low of 106 in November.

The average of the price index in January was 116. On March 20 it stood at 126, registering a recovery of 20 per cent from the low. Most of the improvement has come in the stocks of those companies supplying equipment for road building and other heavy construction purposes.

Residential building has remained quiet and profit margins in this field have not been large. Distinct improvement in building reports during the first three weeks in March strongly indicate that the industry has turned the corner, and, under the influence of low money rates, is expected to show further substantial improvement as the year progresses.

STOCK MARKET CLOSES STRONG IN WALL ST.

By STANLEY W. PRENOSIL.

New York, April 5 (AP)—The stock market, after absorbing a heavy volume of profit-taking, closed today with an outburst of strength.

Heavy buying of public utilities and oils in the last half hour of trading checked the reaction in the general list and left closing prices irregularly higher.

American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, International Harvester and the Standard Oil issues reached new high ground for the year.

Gains in the active issues ranged from one to eight points. American Telephone crossed 270 for the first time this year and then eased to 269, up 1½ points net.

Consolidated Gas closed 3¾ points higher at 131 and Columbia Gas made a net gain of 3 points at 86¾.

Pool operators succeeded in marking up at least a score of issues to new high levels for the year on gains which ran from 1 to 7 points, but this was offset by a long list of declines ranging from 1 to nearly 6 points.

J. J. Case dropped over 5 points, Ward Baking preferred 5 and American Machine & Foundry, United Aircraft, Worthington Pump, American Telephone, Ward Baking "B," Electric Power & Light and Bullard were hammered down 2 to 3½ points before effective buying support made its appearance.

Heavy buying of the oils checked the reactionary price tendency in the last hour. Standard Oils of New Jersey, New York and California moved into a new high ground. International Harvester ran up nearly 5 points to a new top. Cluett Peabody advanced to double the year's low.

New highs for the year were registered by Motor Products, Engineers Public Service, Stone & Webster, North American Co., General Electric, Penick & Ford, United Corporation, Utilities Power & Light, Commonwealth & Southern and National Air Transport.

The closing was irregular.

Schulte Stores' Report Is Given

New York, April 5—Schulte Retail Stores Corp. (holding company) for year ended December 31, 1929, shows net of $1,072,211 after charges, equivalent after 8 per cent preferred dividend requirements to 28 cents a share on 1,138,711 no-par shares of common. Figures do not include equity of $657,782 in earnings of Schulte Real Estate Co., Inc. In 1928 net after federal taxes was $4,525,711 equivalent after preferred dividends to $3.33 a share on 1,133,058 common shares then outstanding.

After dividends on preferred and common there was a deficit of $671,015, against deficit of $147,120 in 1928. Company charged out adjustments of $1,468,912, against profit and loss surplus account, reducing it to $4,111,667 Dec. 31, 1929, against $6,310,429 at close of 1928.

Wheat Prices Rise in Chicago Market

Chicago, April 5—Wheat prices here took a new upward swing today, despite downturns in quotations at Liverpool. Persistent lack of rain in domestic winter wheat territory counted as the principal bullish influence here and more than offset Liverpool reports of prospective enlarged world shipments.

Opening unchanged to 1¼c higher, Chicago wheat afterward showed decided general advance. Corn and oats were firm, corn starting unchanged to ⅜c higher and subsequently rising all around, but then reacting somewhat.

Prices Are Steady in Cotton Market

New York, April 5—Cotton Futures were steady today. May, 16.37; July, 16.42; October, 15.79; December, 15.90; January, 15.91. New contracts—October, 15.51; December, 15.65; January, 15.71.

Tractor Shipments

New York, April 5—More than 68 per cent of total exports of Fordson tractors from Ford plant at Cork, Ireland, being shipped to United States. During first two months of this year 5660 tractors were exported to all countries, of which 3876 were sent to New York.

Dividend Ordered

Twelve British Motor Companies Seen in Merger Plan

New York, April 5—The Evening Post says motor combination is being negotiated in England by which 12 automobile companies would be grouped under one control board, according to reports from London. Capital, it is understood will be approximately $125,000,000. Success of plan would mean stabilization of industry into four main producing sections including Morris Motors and British Ford, the latter backed by Henry Ford. The Dagenham Essex factory is expected to produce 200,000 cars and trucks.

NEWS OF BOSTON MARKETS

QUINCY MINING IS AT HIGH FOR YEAR

Quincy Mining, reflecting favorable ore developments at the mine, was among the most active issues for the week-end in Boston Stock Exchange dealings. Quincy sold at its high for the year and finished within a fraction thereof.

Jenkins Television, which has more than doubled in market value during the past week, was churned over in large volume, and finished the session unchanged from Friday's close.

Engineers Public Service sold close to its 1930 best, up 1½ at 62⅞.

Eastern Gas & Fuel and Boston Elevated were slightly lower.

Quincy interests report some of the best ground opened in the mine has been exposed in the 90th or bottom level of No. 6 shaft. North of the shaft, for a distance of 600 to 800 feet, it is rich in copper, above the average of the mine. Mass copper and heavy barrel work also abound. Masses of weight from 10 to 12 tons each have been taken out in drifting. It is estimated that Quincy now has better than 40,000 feet of new openings in which no stoping has been done.

The remodeled No. 6 hoist is working smoothly and efficiently. At the mill flotation has reduced losses to two pounds of copper per ton of rock treated. The waste has eebn lower than this, but the stamping of richer rock has raised the average. The lower the t nor of the feed to flotation, the smaller the losses. Further improvements will be made to obtain a higher percentage of recovery.

STOCKS CLOSE HIGHER

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, April 5 (AP)—The curb market absorbed a large volume of week-end profit-taking in good style today, and after selling off moderately, rallied in the last half hour of trading, under the leadership of the utilities and oils. Closing prices were mostly steady to firm. Price changes were mostly narrow.

Niagara Hudson continued to creep further into new high ground for the year, closing at 21¼, up ⅛. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore and Central States Electric moved up to around their best levels of the year. The Electric Bond and Share group, however, closed off slightly. Bond and Share, American Superpower and the United Gas issues were off about ½ point each. American Gas and Electric was a soft spot, dropping nearly 4 points.

In the oils, Humble and Gulf rose more than a point each. Cities Service was steady, and Indian Territory "B" sold up a little in the late trading. Standard of Indiana rose ½ point, touching 58½, its highest level this year.

Industrials and specialties were irregular, and largely moved in narrow ranges. Deere new was again a strong spot, closing about a point higher. Crocker Wheeler sagged at the opening, but rallied and closed fairly steady.

Aluminum Co., which shot up sharply yesterday in response to dismissal of trust complaints by the Federal Trade Commission, moved up a point more into new high ground for the year. Marine Midland, bank stock holding company, rose a point to a new high for the movement.

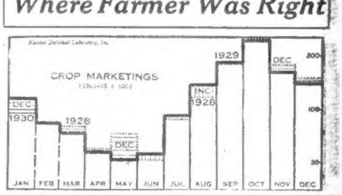
Where Farmer Was Right



In each month since September of last year monthly crop marketings have been on an increasingly moderate scale as compared with corresponding months of the year preceding.

By J. W. LAIRD
(Irving Fisher Service)

During October last and, to a greater extent since that time, crop marketings in the United States have been lower than they had been in the corresponding period of the year preceding. The year 1928 was a "bumper" year in many crops, however, and this would account for smaller volume this season.

As regards the low rate of marketings in January last, the situation seems to be that a goodly part of deliveries to primary markets were made as soon as harvesting was completed. The choked terminals of last fall testified to this condition.

The event has proved that whether through shrewdness or mass psychology the farmers got their grain, cotton and other crops to market before prices had begun to slump badly and as a result the speculative element, for this time at least, has been left to "hold the bag."

BOND MARKET PRICES FIRM

BY JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, April 5 (AP)—Investment Bonds, especially the Rails, firmed in the two-hour trading session today. Amusement issues carrying stock features turned heavy. General Theatres Equipment 6s lost 3 points and Loew's 6s declined 2.

The firmer Railroad issues included Santa Fe General 4s, Pennsylvania 4½s, New Haven 4½s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Kansas City Southern 5s and Union Pacific 4½s. American Telephone 5s of 1965 and Western Union 5s, made small advances. Republic Iron & Steel 5½s, rose more than a point.

American Telephone Convertible 4½s declined about 2 points on light selling. Baltimore & Ohio 4½s and International Telephone 4½s were firm.

Refrigerator Orders to Keep Plant Busy Till Late in May

Chicago, April 5—The first orders resulting from the introduction of the new model Norge refrigerator of the Norge Corporation, division of Borg-Warner Corporation, will absorb the production of the entire plant until late in May. This was announced today by Howard E. Blood, president of the subsidiary company. The new refrigerator is equipped with the rollator type of compressor, an innovation which is claimed to be superior to the cylinder and piston models.

Southern Grocery's Sales Are Larger

New York, April 5—The Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., reports gross sales for the 28 day period ending March 29, 1930, of $1,335,000 as compared with $1,185,000 for the corresponding period of 1929, representing an increase of 12.65 per cent. For the three months period ending March 29, 1930, sales were $4,305,000 as compared to $3,475,000 for the corresponding period of 1929, representing an increase of 23.92 per cent. The company reports 408 stores and 188 meat markets in operation as of March 29, 1930, as compared with 400 stores and 181 meat markets during similar period of 1929.

Wheat Surplus Solution: Let Us Consume it

Lee Marshall, Big Bakery Company Head, Outlines How; Young's Able Son

—By B. C. FORBES—

NEW YORK, April 5—The newer generation take to the newer industries. Like President Hoover's sons, Owen D. Young's oldest is devoting himself to radio. Charles D. Young's achievement in developing a machine which printed a San Francisco newspaper page flashed across the continent by radio to General Electric's research laboratory lands him, at one bound, in the class of John Hays Hammond, Jr., the inventor, son of a notable parent.

B. C. Forbes

Mr. Young had another son who also chose not to follow in the parental legal footsteps. He went West and joined a leading electric light and power company's working force. While still a mere youth, he tragically lost his life. Charles, who is around 30, is tied up with a branch of the Radio Corporation of America which delves into new things, affording abundant scope for research and inventive genius.

Perhaps it was the news of this latest triumph in the radio field which caused Radio shares to jump to a new peak for the year yesterday morning. Apparently the science of radio is only in its infancy, with unimagined potentialities ahead.

What to do with our surplus wheat is the most pressing agricultural problem facing the United States. Lee Marshall, president of the Continental Baking Corporation and one of the biggest buyers of wheat in the country, offers this novel solution—novel in that no one else has urged it:

"Consume it."

If we consumed our surplus, about 120,000,000 bushels, we would still be eating less than half as much bread as most Europeans and less than half, also, of Canada's per capita consumption. Although we raise the most wheat, we eat the least bread.

Mr. Marshall, when asked if he could offer any suggestion concerning the plight this country finds itself in, made the following statement for readers of this column:

"The present unfortunate and unsound wheat situation in this country is traceable directly to the war. Everybody was then taught to eat less bread and the farmers were exhorted to put more acreage in wheat. This may have been necessary as a wartime measure, but the country has never recovered from the evil results of it. It is up to the government to undo what it then brought about. There is no hope for practical farm relief unless we consume more wheat.

"Consumption of wheat in the United States today is one bushel per capita less than it was prior to the war. A return to pre-war consumption would exactly take care of the wheat surplus, which is about 120,000,000 bushels over and above our exports. The only way to solve the problem is to consume what we grow or grow what we can consume.

"There is no use in trying to 'dump' our surplus wheat abroad, since wheat surplus is literally a world-wide condition. Most European countries in normal times produce a surplus. They are erecting tariff barriers against imports of wheat. Germany today is conducting an 'Eat More Bread' campaign, actively supported by the government, to solve its own surplus problem. The League of Nations, recognizing that wheat surplus is an international problem, is trying to work out a solution.

"But we will have to help ourselves. The government cannot solve our problem by supporting the Chicago wheat market—all that it could do would be to fill the government's pockets with wheat. If the country continues to produce a surplus, we shall finally either have to 'dump' it, if we can, or destroy it—the cost coming out of the taxpayers' pocket.

"If the Farm Board, the Department of Agriculture or any other governmental agency would simply try to undo what the government did during the war the problem would be solved. The government induced the country to consume less bread and the farmers to grow more breadstuffs. By aggressive government organization now the reserve could be brought about and the solution would be automatic.

"What the country needs is a true appraisal of the value of bread as food. A great deal of harm has been done by food faddists. The work of the Food Research Institute at Leland Stanford University and of the Department of Agriculture has made the facts available to the government. The country as a whole should be informed of them."

Go where you will in Wall Street at the moment, you are urged to buy this, that or the next stock. The popular notion—conviction, even—is that quite a brisk advance is on the way.

* * *

Financial highest ups figure that if stocks are forced considerably higher, there will be a sharp reaction. They contend that conditions do not warrant fireworks.

NET FOR MASS. UTILITIES IS UP FOR YEAR

Massachusetts Utilities Associates reports for 1929 consolidated gross income of $11,750,988 and net income after interest, maintenance, depreciation and taxes of $2,107,093, equal after preferred dividends to 35 cents a share on the 1,767,504 common voting trust shares.

In the previous years consolidated gross income totaled $10,977,202 and net income $1,994,389, equal after preferred dividends to 25 cents a share on the 1,765,085 common voting trust shares outstanding on Dec. 31, 1928.

The increase in direct surplus during 1929 amounting to $252,708, against an increase of $230,393 in 1928, was due to the fact that some expenses incident to organization of the trust in 1927 were taken care of during 1928 and consequently did not recur in 1929. No part of the increase in surplus came from increased dividends of the operating companies.

In no case has the dividend rate on the stock of an operating company been changed from the rate prevailing at the time of formation of Massachusetts Utilities Associates early in 1927. However, there have been steady reductions in rates to consumers by the operating companies.

Other investments carried on the balance sheet at $6,119,053, include 22,732 shares of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, owned directly by the Massachusetts Utilities Associates. These are exclusive of 4000 shares of Boston Edison stock owned by Massachusetts Lighting Companies.

Grand Union Company

Grand Union Co. sales for 13 weeks ended March 29, 1930, were $8,828,465, against $7,505,787 a year before, an increase of $1,322,678 or 17.6 per cent.

At the Radio Dial

By THE RADIO EDITOR

SAN FRANCISCO steps into the spotlight tonight with a nation-wide broadcast of imposing character. A new series, spreading sweet music and proclaiming the loveliness of sun-kissed edibles, lifts its voice before the microphone at 8:30 tonight by our reckoning, or 5:30 as clocks go on the coast.

The California program will be heard locally through WEEI and other N. B. C. stations. Pacific Coast stations will not convey this broadcast, but will carry a repetition of the entire proceedings several hours later. Bebe Daniels is the emphasized entertainer in tonight's inaugural. She will sing "I'm Always in Your Arms," a number in which she has been heard in the talkie, "Rio Rita." Four scenes from this operetta will be staged for tonight's radio party, with melody supplied by a large orchestra, a mixed chorus and a group of soloists, all directed by Emil Pollak.

Ginger Rogers

PERSONALITIES flare up suddenly these days. One of these is Ginger Rogers. She's booked for an important radio feature tonight, namely, the Para[illegible]ublix Ho[illegible] on Columbia stations at 10 o'clock. Her namesake, Will Rogers, is a Sabbath night broadcaster tomorrow. There is little in common between the two. Ginger does those baby-voice ballads something after the manner of Helen Kane, and she has it all over Will so far as personal pulchritude goes. Closely elbowed around the microphone with this new musical comedy-talkie star will be found Jesse Crawford, organist; Marcia Freer, mezzo-soprano; Harriet Lee, contralto; Paul Small, tenor; Paul Ash, Stanley Smith and David Mendoza conducting the orchestra.

AN ORCHESTRA of 200 players, made up of individual orchestras from 20 or more Berkshire towns, will broadcast a program of miscellaneous numbers over WBZA at 9 o'clock tonight as a part of that station's weekly feature, "Gentlemen of the Press." The young musicians will be directed in their various offerings by a succession of supervisors of music from half a dozen towns. The program has been arranged by the Pittsfield Berkshire Eagle.

SHOW BOAT fans should note that this feature has changed schedule with "The Nit Wits." Consequently it goes on the air at 9 o'clock over Columbia Stations.

REV. LOUIS J. GALLAGHER, S. J., assistant director of Papal Relief in Russia in 1922 and 1923, will be the special speaker in tomorrow afternoon's Catholic Truth broadcast on WNAC. He will discuss "Religious Persecution in Russia." At one time, Father Gallagher was handling the feeding of 160,000 native children.

WILL ROGERS, in his single oratorical endeavor on behalf of persons who need no longer be told they have expensive feet, paid his compliments to his fellow-salesmen, Amos 'n' Andy last Sunday. He took the trouble to make clear that the black-face pair are boosting a dentifrice, but he said "Sozodont" instead of "Pepsodent." Was this just a slip of the tongue? Will doesn't make many unintentional slips. Tomorrow he starts a series of 13 ballyhoo talks on behalf of still another manufacturer of toothpaste. These soliliquies will be heard over Columbia Stations at 10 p. m., Sundays. Voracious rumor hath it that his emoluments will click off at a rate of about $500 a minute.

ONE OF THE most enjoyable programs on the air last evening was the Cities Service Hour directed by Rossario Bourdon. In an evening devoted largely to dance and band music, this miscellaneous grouping of classical and concert numbers was somewhat of a relief. Clinging to the memory is Jessica Dragonette's brilliant singing of the Spanish "Clavelitos." The fast-running song, favored by celebrities of the opera-concert world, lost none of its sparkle and none of its speed on the lips of this favorite radio artist. Concession to popular taste was made with modern ballads such as "Should I?", "If You Were the Only Girl," and Waters of the Minnetonka," sung variously by Miss Dragonette, Leo O'Rouke and John Seagle in solo and duet.

GAINS NOTED IN INDUSTRY

New York, April 5—Distributive trade, particularly wholesale and jobbing business, has improved over recent weeks, according to the report of Bradstreet's issued today. The report says:

"While there is general agreement that distributive trade, particularly wholesale and jobbing business, has improved over recent weeks, the enlargement has proceeded along conservative lines while retail trade, affected by irregular weather, cold and rain predominating, has tended to do little more than mark time pending the nearer approach of Easter shopping and weather.

The higher lights of the week have been visible, mainly in the industrial branches, where slight gains over recent weks are reported in production of pig iron and ingot steel; in the reports of improved working schedules in the automobile trade, this reported in the taking of body sheets; in the shoe manufacturing trade where a fillip to manufacture has been given by delayed Easter buying and in clothing, dress and knit goods manufacturing where seasonal orders have been accumulated.

DINE AND DANCE

WHERE YOU GET GOOD FOOD, MUSIC, VAUDEVILLE AND DANCING

Cavana Service Like Sunny Italy

Mme. Cavana

She also serves a noonday luncheon and course dinner at a reasonable price, also, a la carte service throughout the day.

Delightful Resort in Chinatown

The Gamsun Restaurant, 21 Hudson st., one of the most beautiful Chinese restaurants in the heart of Chinatown, has a bill of fare that will please the most critical palate. A popular luncheon and an excellent dinner is served at convenient hours.

After that theater party, a visit to the Gamsun Restaurant, with courteous service and a splendid dinner at moderate prices will prove enjoyable. Service is a la carte.

Daily Tea Dancing Offered at Yen Ho

The management of the Yen Ho restaurant, 245 Tremont st., announce that they will have tea dancing every afternoon from 3 to 5, beginning today, with dance music by Frankie Maynard and his orchestra.

Bridge clubs and women's societies are invited, and special parties will be accommodated. A special tea room menu will be served without cover charge. For information call Jimmy.

Oasis Cabaret Is Lively Show

The Oasis Restaurant at 46 Winchester st. is proving popular with night life habitues. Steve Hung, whoopee king, keeps things lively throughout the evening.

Vin Vincent

A stella cabaret show is being offered this week, featuring Jarvis and Jay DeHaven Sisters, Major Duo and Burlie and Ludlow. Vin Vincent and his orchestra are winning great broadcasting favor.

Easter, Hazelton Return to Grove

The return to Cocoanut Grove of the famous dancing team, Easter and Hazelton, direct from European triumphs, finds their popularity greater than ever. With Mickie Alpert presiding, they offer startling interpretations.

Lun Ting Popular West End Resort

The spacious floor for dancing, and excellent menu, is a decided attraction for theatergoers who wish to have a bite to eat and dance after the show.

Spinning Yarns at the Captain's Table

C. L. Mener "Capt." Frawley Neal Ensten

Harvey Hayes Roslyn Green Margaret O'Connor William Shelly Joslyn

"At the Captain's Table" is the title of a new radio feature to be broadcast every Thursday evening over WJZ. It is sponsored by Paul J. Chapman, president of the United States Lines, and will present true stories of sea life. "Tim" Frawley, old Irish actor, plays the captain. They will tell stories both of the old clipper days and the modern steamship.

Gripping tales of the men "who go down to the sea in ships" will be a new feature of the WJZ broadcast every Thursday evening from 6:15 to 6:45.

The title of the series will be "At the Captain's Table," and the shipmaster will be portrayed by "Tim" Frawley, an Irish actor of the old school.

The feminine star is Margaret O'Connor, wife of a Dover, N. J., attorney, and winner of a first prize as America's most beautiful mother in a recently conducted magazine contest. The stories will carry down from the days of clipper ships to the present.

LEGAL NOTICES

(D. P. U. 3872)
THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

In Department of Public Utilities

Boston, April 1, 1930.

On the petition of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company for approval of a contract for the sale of gas to the Old Colony Gas Company, the Commission of the Department of Public Utilities will give a public hearing to all parties interested at its hearing-room, 166 State House, Boston, on Thursday, the tenth day of April current, at twelve o'clock noon.

And the petitioner is required to give notice of said hearing by serving a copy hereof upon the respective mayors of Boston, Chelsea, Newton, Waltham and Quincy, and upon the respective chairmen of the selectmen of Brookline, Milton, Watertown, Wellesley, Abington, Braintree, Hingham, Rockland, Weymouth, Weston, Whitman, Cohasset and Hull five days at least prior to the date of said hearing, to publish a copy hereof in the Boston Globe, Boston Post, Boston American, Boston Herald, Boston Transcript, Christian Science Monitor, Newton Graphic, Waltham News-Tribune, Watertown Tribune-Enterprise and Quincy Patriot Ledger in each of said papers once at least prior to the date of said hearing, and to make return of service and publication at the time of hearing.

By order of the Department,
(Signed) ANDREW A. HIGHLANDS,
Secretary.
